THE DETROIT COLLEGE:

Show Date: December 29, 1880

Title: ELMA, THE DRUID MARTYR

Written by unknown

Performances 1 Where: The Detroit Opera House

Director: Mr. Conway, S.J.

Melodramatic Accompaniment: Spiela Orchestra under the direction of Professor Gerold of Cincinnati, O.

Prologue: Mr. Egbert Field

Costumes: Miss Baines & J. B. Loranger

Comments: This play was presented by students of the Detroit College for the benefit of St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum. The ticket price was $ .50 and the performance ran from 8:00 PM to 12:00 AM with three intermissions.

The presentation of this play was made possible through the efforts of a group of students who first got together in 1878 to read and produce plays for their own amusement.

The staging of ELMA and a subsequent very unfavorable review of the play in the Detroit Evening News (entitled "Theatrical Nightmare at the Detroit") set off a storm of controversy with the Evening News being accused of being "anti-Irish and anti-Catholic." For a more complete account of this debate, see Part I of History of Theater at U-D.
CLAY CLEMENT DRAMATIC CLUB: DETROIT COLLEGE

Show Date: April 4, 1894

Title: THE REWARD OF TREACHERY

Written by Rev. Hind S.J.

Performances 1 Where: Parochial School Hall

Director Mr. Harrington S.J.

Set Design:

Costume Design:

Student Director:

Stage Manager:

Performers: unknown

Comments: Notes say that the CLAY CLEMENT DRAMATIC CLUB was formed on Nov 14, 1892 by Rev. Magivney, S.J. to provide the students with an outlet for their need to perform the literature they had been studying. It was restricted to the three upper classes and 15 students were the initial members. They approved a "constitution, by-laws, and appointed a committee on plays."

The first play open to the public was this "The Reward of Treachery" in 1894. Played with "remarkable success before a (paid) delighted audience" of 350 ($ .25 admission)

A note in the archive reads: "Notes on additional plays, rehearsals, etc. from this date to April 17, 1903, "The House of St. Quentin" All this material on xerox."

(So far, no note on who or what this Clay Clement could have been AND no further information on these productions have been found.)
THE CLAY CLEMENT DRAMATIC CLUB: DETROIT COLLEGE

Show Date: Jan 2, 1895

Title: THE TRIUMPH OF JUSTICE

Performances 1 Where: Parochial School Hall

Director: Mr. Harrington, S. J. (Faculty Director)

Designer: Brother J. Louis, S.J.

Builder: Brother J. Louis, S.J.

Student Director:

Stage Manager:

Comments: VN (2-22-28 History of U-D) "... a melodrama in three acts was presented by the students in the Parochial school Hall. The scenery was wonderful, the play quite good, the audience quite small. Scenery was by Brother J. Louis, S.J. who came to U-D the previous November (1894) just for this play."
THE DETROIT COLLEGE: SHOW ROSTER

Title: TRIAL SCENE FROM THE MERCHANT OF VENICE

Written by William Shakespeare

Performances 1 Where: Harmonie Hotel - Detroit 8:00 P.M.

Director: Not Listed

On the same Show:

Dramatic Reading of THE RIME OF THE ANCIENT MARINER

Narrator: Thos. McGoldrick

Wedding Guest: John Walsh

Spirit Voices: Harry Ryan George Seymour

Ancient Mariner: Charles Benson

The program also included:

- an overture ("The Brownies" by Douglas) performed by the College Orchestra,

- a quartette ("Fest March" by Kern) performed by the Glee Club,

- and a waltz ("Fille 'Amour" by Bennet) performed by the Mandolin and Guitar Club.
THE PHILOMATHIC SOCIETY:

Season -19/20- Show Dates from: April 11, 12, 13, 14, 1920

Title: THE UPPER ROOM

Written by Prof. Charlemagne Kohler

Performances 4 Where: Elks Temple (2) Palm Sunday & Monday St. Vincents Hall (2) Holy Tuesday & Wednesday

Directed by: Prof. Charlemagne Kohler - Elocution Professor - UofD

Comments: By all accounts the Star of this excellent production was senior Lit student Maurice F. Ronayne (20) playing the role of Judas. This production played during Passion Week. Mr. Ronayne had won the Elocution Award in the Spring of 1919 (Shylock's Soliloquy) and was the Philomathic Club President for the year 1919-1920. His strong voice challenged his fellow actors to reach a higher excellence. (VN 4-21-20)

Prior to the final production on Wednesday, Mr. Ronayne felt poorly but went on with the show and had his usual fine performance. Following the show he collapsed with a nervous breakdown and then died on Easter Morning (4-18-20) with what was described as a "nervous heart." He is buried in Mt. Olivet Cemetery in Detroit.

It seems to me that the manner of Maurice Ronayne's death is what every actor, if given a choice, would want for themselves: coming after the last act of the last performance. And, it's also what we expect every director would demand: total commitment to a role letting nothing interfere with the actors completion of the task assigned.

Maurice, my hat is off to you! You are and will be remembered.
THESPIAN CLUB: SHOW ROSTER

Season: 1920     Show Dates: April 21, 1920

Title: AS YOU LIKE IT

Performances 1     Where: Orchestra Hall

Director: Prof. Koehler (Elocution Professor - UofD)

Performers: Miss Hazel Moran (Law '22), Leo A. Hogue (C&F '22), Francis A. Long, John W. Babcock, John J. Curran, Walter T. Ellis, Simeon J. Miner, Joseph C. Wallich, John J. Gilmore, Wendell V. Hall, Charlemagne Koehler as "Touchstone" the Fool,
John R. Monaghan, DeLancy C. Haven, Paul O'I. Buckley, Catherine Goodwin, Esther L. Anhut, and Anna M. Hackett.

Comments: "Miss Moran's portrayal of 'Rosalind' was rated by Prof.
Koehler as being of a professional caliber despite the fact that it was her first appearance on stage." (Alumnus, Jan, 1931)

VN "... exceeding the fondest expectations... Miss Moran is a star.
Space will not permit dwelling on the excellent work of all the other characters. But it may be said here that each student acquitted himself splendidly. It is earnestly hoped that those in charge may be able to put on the play again soon in the city as well as in nearby cities..."

The Play was performed under the auspices and control of, and with all proceeds going to, the University Athletic Association.

Title: THE THIRD FLOOR BACK

Written by Jerome K. Jerome

Performances 4 Where: Opened at Holy Redeemer Hall

Director: Winniet P. Wright (also listed as Theater Director)
Publicity: Joe Costello Stage Manager: Emmett Collins

Ticket Sales: John Flannery Lighting: Jim Flynn

Performers: Margaret Sage Buchanan, Florence M. Leahy, Florence Bourke, Lucile Walker, Esther Anhut, Cecile Dacey, DeLancy Haven, Henry R. MacCartney, Sheldon Smith, Gene Devlin, George Curran, and Wynn P. Wright as "the Stranger."

Comments: Subsequently this play also played the Garrick Theater - Detroit on Saturday, March 4, 1922, as well as performances in Monroe, Pontiac, Windsor, Bay City, Saginaw and Flint.

This play was originally written in England as a farewell vehicle for Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, renowned of the English Theater, to make a final visit to all the provinces.

This production also marked the debut of the U-D Little Symphony under director Julian Winterhalter, himself a U-D student. Modeled after the Little Symphony of the Russian Ballet it was the first of its type at any college or university.

N.B. For a more complete discussion of the formation of The University Theater and this production see Part 1, HISTORY OF THEATER AT U-D.

Title: SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE

Director: Frederick Kaufman (Dir of Bonstelle Company)

Performers: Wendell Hall, LaVerne West, John Collins,
Paul Cosault, Cecile M. Dacey, Margaret S. Bucanan, Fred E. Kaufman, Ruth M. Kelly, Charles J. Pastor, Phillip Neudeck, Walter Perkins, Francis J. O'Reilly, Leo A. Dougher, and Eugene W. Secord.

Comments: The Varsity News article of the day says the production was very well received but gave no specifics beyond the fact that this was "easily the most expensive play to date."

Mr. Frederick Kaufman was brought in from the Bonstelle Theater Company to direct this play as replacement for Winn Wright who left after an apparent artistic conflict with the University. From this point on, theater at U-D was brought back under University control with appointed Faculty Moderators and eventually a Faculty Chairman.

N.B. For a more complete discussion of this change of policy and the real reasons behind it, see Part II of The History of Theater at The University of Detroit.

Season -23/24-    Show Date: February 23, 1924
Title:             TWELFTH NIGHT

Performances  4    Where: IHM Auditorium-Monroe (3)
                   Orchestra Hall (1)

Director: Francis J. McCabe
Music supplied by The Detroit Symphony Trio

Performers: Roselyn Davidson, Clement Singer, Edward Rotarius, Laurence Henderson, Paul Kenny, Gervase Magrum, Maude K. Krauele, Ray F. Griese, Clarence Donovan, Edward Kelly, Marguerite Zilske, Ambrose Singer, John George Slevin, P. Ralph Miller, Frank Hennes, Laurence Carolyn, Mildred Gleason, Dolores Haley, Daniel Sheeran, James P. Falvey, and John McIntosh.

Comments: Per Director McCabe this particular play was chosen for production because it demanded a large cast and "would give everyone a chance to get up on the stage." (VN)

(VN) Staff "The well-filled house, which witnessed Saturday evening's performance of TWELFTH NIGHT at Orchestra Hall, were treated to wholesome generosity of finished acting and pleasing comedy.
Striking evidences of painstaking preparation, coupled with a deal of rising talent, were noted throughout the five acts...

"In the major roles, Roselyn Davidson (Viola) and Edward Kelly, as Malvolio, took the evenings honors, with Margaret Zilske, as Olivia, and Gervase Magrum, playing the role Sir Toby, tipster par excellence, coming next in order... Maude Kraule, deserves honorable mention. Ray Griese took off the timid Sir Andrew in 'timorous tones' which seemed to go well with the auditors.

"The success achieved by the University students... marks another step towards the building up of a well-known and accomplished group of players. To Francis McCabe, play director, a large portion of the credit is due."
UNIVERSITY PLAYERS -

Season -24/25- Show Date: December 5 and 7, 1924
Title: THE CLOD

Written by Lewis Beach

Performances 4 Where: Annunciation Hall

Director Professor Daniel E. Sullivan
Tech Director:
Costume Design:
Stage Manager:

Performers: Frank Hennes, Clara Chill, Charles Castellano, LaVerne LaSeau, and John Trudeau.

This play, "THE CLOD," was a Harvard Prize Winner.

Comments: VN John George Slevin "'THE CLOD' by Lewis Beach, was a story of the Civil War days. Although well acted, its climax was far-fetched. It does not seem natural that a woman would commit murder because a Southern soldier who had demanded food of her, did not like the fare she gave him. 'To hold a mirror up to nature' is as much the business of the playwright as of the actors. This Beach did not quite do.

"Had it not been for the superb work of the cast in THE CLOD, the play would have been a frost. Perhaps the best performance was that of Frank Hennes, who, with a prodigality of voice and gesture, was very convincing as a blustering bully of a southern sergeant. Miss Clara Chill and Charles Castellano handled their parts with intelligence. LaVerne LaSeau rendered the lines of the wounded Northern soldier very effectively. John Trudeau, as a wearer of the gray, did well. He had improved since he was last seen treading the boards.

"On the whole, the work of the University Players reflected credit on the University. In most instances they made the play more interesting than most amateurs would in like circumstances."
UNIVERSITY PLAYERS -

Title: ENTR' ACTE (BETWEEN THE ACTS)

Written by Marie McWilliams

Performances 4 Where: Annunciation Hall

Director: Professor Daniel E. Sullivan

Set Design:

Costume Design:

Student Director: Stage Manager:

Performers: William Ronayne, Miss Albertine Schmidtke, and Miss Elizabeth McBride

Comments: John George Slevin (VN) Dec 17, 1924

"ENTR' ACTE, a triangular love affair built around the characters of Romeo, Juliet, and Carmen, that an aspiring dramatist is supposed to have written into a playlet being rehearsed by three society people, was indeed entertaining.

"Mary MacMillan, the authoress, has a deft touch, especially in dialogue, that wins over her audience immediately. The Romeo of William Ronayne was a difficult part, but this young man handled it with an ease of manner not usually found in a production of this kind. He was assisted by Miss Albertine Schmidtke, who sang very well and by Miss Elizabeth McBride.

"Entertaining though ENTR' ACTE was, yet it seemed out of place in the field of college dramatics. The method in which one of the parts was enacted was distinctly distasteful to this reviewer."
UNIVERSITY PLAYERS -
Season -24/25- Show Date: December 5 and 7, 1924
Title: THE NEW WORLD
Written by J. M. Barrie

Performances 4 Where: Annunciation Hall
Director: Professor Daniel E. Sullivan
Set Design:
Costume Design:
Stage Manager:
Performers: Roselyn Davidson, Edward Kelly, Martin Bruton, Ruth Munson,

Comments: J.M Barrie's THE NEW WORLD, a play dealing with the English abhorrence for any show of affection between father and son, was received by the audience with more enthusiasm than the other two.

"Miss Roselyn Davidson spoke her lines with much sympathy and understanding, but she seemed too refreshingly young for her part. Grease paint and powder proved quite ineffective in adding to her years. Edward Kelly, while he disported himself with credit as second 'left'nant' in His Majesty's forces, did not reach the mark he set for himself in OFFICER 666 and TWELFTH NIGHT.

"Martin Bruton did not fit his part as well as the part seemed to fit him. There were possibilities in it which Mr. Bruton fell short of realizing. Still, considering that it was his first appearance, this gentleman gave evidence of an intelligent reading of lines. Miss Ruth Munson was her flapperish self and effectively so as the daughter. We would like to see Miss Munson in a bigger part. It is evident that she has histrionic talent worthy of more than a 'bit'

The U-D High School Orchestra under the direction of Professor D'Avignon Morel, rendered several selections most pleasingly. Praise is due to the technicians, who never missed a cue."

Moderator: Rev. J.J. Horst, S.J. (Dean A&S U-D)

Set Design:

Student Director:

Stage Manager:

Performers: Daniel M. Sunday, Edward Kelley, Roselyn Davidson
William Wagner, Donald MacFarlane, Dorothy Look, Francis Crane, Constance Maier, Hodge Roselyn Davidson, William Gregory, and James Bellaimey.

Comments: Per Father Horst, S.J.: "... a comedy, light and replete with characters suited for amateur presentation..."
UNION OPERA THEATER: SHOW ROSTER

Season -1926-1927- Date (From) Dec 19, 1926 to Dec 25, 1926
(Admission $1.00 - $2.50)

Title: MERRY-ANN

Performances 9 Where: Shubert Theater - Detroit

Director: John Harwood (Paid through the Shubert Organization)

Music by Paul Madera Mertz Lyrics by Ange Lorenzo (Law)
James S. Pooler

Book: James Silas Pooler (Senior C&F) and P.Ralph Miller (Ed: VN)

Assistant Musical Director: Hans Fry (Paid Position)

President of Union: Alan Devine (Paid Position)

Assistant to Mr. Harwood: Charlie Fink

Director of Dance and Chorus: Max Schenk (Paid position)

General Chairman: Cornelius F. McIntyre (Senior A&S)

Stage Manager: Miss Louise Gilbert

Performers: Cast of 50, all male students of U-D, including as "Miss Merry Ann" sophomore Eric Carlson and Tom McLaughlin playing
"Toughie."

Notes: Len G. Shaw (DFP) "Last but by no means least in the numerous groups of institutions where the presentation of a play of student origin is one of the yearly items of importance, the University of Detroit submitted is initial production for the consideration of an enthusiastic outpouring at the Shubert-Detroit Sunday evening. It seemed to be the unanimous verdict that everyone in any way connected with the venture had acquitted himself with credit.

"The performance moved with professional celerity... Paul Mertz has trimmed all this with tunes that are easy to listen to. Mertz reveals a distinct flair for catchy composition..."

"All of these, and many more are rendered with the assistance of an ensemble of 'ladies' and young men who seemed to get as much fun out of their work Sunday night as the customers did in watching them.
They danced agreeably, and if the illusion of femininity was not complete in every instance it merely served to add to the merriment..."

"MERRY-ANN will be on view for the rest of the week. It is recommended as cheerful Christmas fare that will awaken campus memories, and otherwise entertain."
THE UNIVERSITY OF DETROIT UNION OPERAS: SHOW ROSTER

Season -27/28- Show Date: Dec 18, 1927 to Jan 1, 1928

Title: ACES WILD

Book and Lyrics by James S. Pooer
Music by Frederick Bergin

Performances 19 Where: Shubert-Lafayette

Director: John Harwood Choreographer: Max Scheck

Musical Director: Hans Frey

Comments: VN reports that the Show for the two week run attracted 20,000 paid attendance. They report that the Union gained a net profit of approximately $600.00 to $1,000.00.

Notes: Len G. Shaw (DFF) "Any doubts they may have harbored as to the success of their second venture into the field of musical comedy must have been speedily dissipated Sunday evening as the sponsors of ACES WILD listened to the applause which greeted their efforts. All the way from librettist, lyricist, and composer down to the least important of the ensemble; a clean hit was scored.

"Some of the principals are familiar from last season's University of Detroit play, others are newcomers of promise. Romance finds its exemplars in Owen Pauline... and Eric Carlson. Pauline has a fine voice and a pleasing stage presence, and Carlson meets all the demands as the lady in the case. Miles McMillan, a bit remindful of Walter Catlett, knows how to put his lines across in true professional style. His career will be worth watching... John Galbo, as the blackface follower of Getter, is a mirthful meke, and James Bellamey is always good for laugh as a passionate senorita...

"'ACES WILD' is more pretentious than the average college production, both as to score and lyrics that have a meaning. Not a song but bears repeating, and several of them will be whistled widely before the week has passed...

"'ACES WILD' will continue through the week at the Shubert Lafayette."

THE UNIVERSITY OF DETROIT UNION OPERAS:

Season -29/30-   Show Date: Sunday, April 20, 1930 thru April 1, 1930

Title: HELLO STRANGER

Book and Lyrics by James S. Pooler

Music by Joseph Kreklow

Choreography by William McGurn

Performances 8   Where: Shubert-Lafayette

Tickets: $2.50 - $1.00

Book Director: Charles LaDouceur

Gen Chairman: Frank Potts   Ass't Chair: James Britt

Cast Mgr: Leo Shubnell   Advertising: Al Nagler and Henry Wich

Stage Manager: Ralph Boone

Major Speaking Parts: Joseph Tocco, George McWilliams, George Nebus, John Galbo, Joseph Nader, Walter Holland, David Leahy, Jack Teubert, Peter Wayne, Roland Denison, John Girardin, Francis Pouliot, Mike Martin, Ignatius Duggan, James Ryan, Alex Janker, and Frank Richards.

Note: The original annotated script in the University archives.

Comments: Although this play is listed out of date sequence, it is placed here because it is the last of the "Union Operas." A Depression was now lurking about the landscape and would soon evolve to become "The Great Depression." Money of the amounts needed to mount shows of the size and consequence of the Union Operas was no longer available. Theater all over America and especially at U-D would, from now on, be a little smaller.

But it was great while it lasted.

For more on the Union Operas, see Part I, THE HISTORY OF THEATER AT THE UNIVERSITY OF DETROIT.

Season -29/30-  Show Dates: Jan 15, 1930 Wednesday 7:00 PM

Performances 1  Where: C&F Florence Ryan Auditorium

Title: TWO GENTLEMEN FROM CHICAGO

Director: Lillian Dixon

Cast: Lillian Dixon, Leo Schubnell, Dave McHardy, George Schweager, Bernard Duggan, and Matthew Gill.

Setting for this play was in a restaurant. Minimal props.

Title: THE DEAR DEPARTED

Director: Dan Sunday (English Professor)

Cast: Mary Friedl, Dolly Bauser, Margie McRae, Harold Cross, Ken Myers, and James Brightwell

General Comments: Father J. Joseph Horst, S.J. Faculty Moderator - Dramatic Club.

The cast for each of these plays was picked at random regardless of talent or experience. In this way, everyone gets involved and "fair play and a square deal, ideals of the club, are achieved. Politics are not given an opportunity to wreck the sincerity and progress of the organization."

THE LITTLE THEATER/PLAYERS; SHOW ROSTER

Season -41/42- Show Dates: Dec 7, 9, 10, 11, 1941

Name: TWELFTH NIGHT

Performances 4 Where: The Little Theater (Chem Bldg)
Director: Moderator Joseph Staudacher
Set Design: John Harrington (Arts Sophomore) Costume Design: Charlotte Heringer (Commerce Senior) House Manager: Robert Van Weemish (Arts Junior)
Lighting by: Edward Hull

Comments: John C. McCabe III remembered listening to the radio and painting the set for TWELFTH NIGHT the afternoon of the opening when the announcer broke in on the music to announce the bombing of Pearl Harbor in far away Hawaii. The music then resumed to a room that was in a much more somber and subdued mood. But everyone kept painting and working because, we all do know that, no matter what... "the show must go on!"
THE LITTLE THEATER/THE PLAYERS: SHOW ROSTER

Season -41/42- Show Dates: Feb 1, 2, 3, 4, 1942

Title: THE LADY OF LYON

Written by Edward Bulwer-Lytton

Performances: None Where: Little Theater - Chem Blgd

Director: Rosemary Hengstebeck and Louis Charbonneau

Set Design:
Costume Design: Ruthe Compton

Chief Electrician: Henry Andrews

Stage Technician: George Laidlaw

Performers: Richard Burgwin (Arts,Fr), Dorothy Brown, George Sanders, James Land, Sandy Givens, William Gudaitis, Louis Charbonneau, Robert Parkinson, Nancy Kennedy,
Paul Baumgartner, Robert Wysocki, and John Daley.

Comments: The Jan 6, 1943 Varsity News carried an article that this play had been canceled after several weeks of preparation because so many of the men in the Players had been drafted or enlisted in the service. Student John McCabe began passing out petitions to force the performance to go on because "theater was so important to the students and this University." Evidently, the U.S. Selective Service was unimpressed.

This turn-over of students was a fact of life that faced all the organizations on campus during World War II. For instance, the team that started that basketball season for U-D was not the same one that ended it. This was true everywhere.

"THE LADY OF LYONS" is listed here as the only play NOT performed at U-D as a tribute to all those U-D students and instructors who persevered with honor both here and around the world during these years.

Set Design:
Costume Design:
Student Director:
Stage Manager: John Linahan

Comments: VN article says the Little Theater now "features indirect lighting, added seats, new curtain, and switchboard."

This play, JANE EYRE, would also prove to be the last one produced in the Little Theater "on the lower concourse of the Chemistry Building." Hereafter the Theater moved to the Commerce Building

Comments: This was the Players annual Christmas party. Admission was a present that could be sent to the St Francis Home for Orphans. This writer had a very good friend who remembered receiving these gifts as a child while at the St. Francis Home. They were his and his two brothers only Christmas presents and were much appreciated and always remembered. "GOOD WORK" Folks and a long distance "THANK YOU" from someone who knows what it all meant.

William McMullen, Rosemary Linahan, Cherie Eberhardt, Betty Lou Schneider, Ruthe Compton, Robert Langin, and Brian McCabe.

Comments: This play was done in the "round." Judging by the comments in the Varsity News, this was first time most of the spectators had seen "Circular Theater" (as they called it). Most everyone enjoyed the production and there was no shortage of suggestions on what play they wanted to see produced next.
Even in later years, the alumni remembered this production of "THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY with great affection.

Comments: VN J.A. Sullivan "FIRST PLAY MAKES HIT"

"... the production, as put on by the Players, is a very pleasant surprise... the characterization ranges from good to excellent, and a young lady with the euphemistic name of Donalda McEachern emerges with top honors for her portrayal of the effusive Sally Prescott...  ... not the least feature of the new circular theater is that it allows you to easily watch the audience across the theater as they react to the play with sorrow or anger..."

Title: WINTERSET

Written by Maxwell Anderson

Performances 4 Where: Dowling Hall Gym (Circular Theater)

Director: Newton T. Stark (English Instructor)

Producer: Richard Burgwin Tech Director: Robert Langin,

Properties: Margaret Rovinsky Lighting: William Gudatis

Stage Manager: John Van Doninck

Comments:
W.T.Rabe VN "With WINTERSET the University of Detroit Players have established something of a landmark in the current post-war revival of campus dramatics. Not that this is a perfect production. A group of amateurs, however, talented, are always open to improvement.

"However, in staging, acting, and general over-all effect this production leaves little room for eye-brow raising and sympathetic criticism by patronizing audiences.

"Louis Charbonneau's performance was obviously the outstanding event of the evening, and in creating this 'God who walks like a man' he produced a characterization easily comprehended by the audience. His delivery was notable and perfectly fitted to the declamatory technique required by Maxwell Anderson's blank verse.

"In the female lead, Donalda McEachern matched Charbonneau with a finely drawn heroine, innocent, sympathetic and understanding. Her delivery was well adapted to both the role and demanding standards of the Circular Theater... Brian McCabe showed great promise..."

Title:  MACBETH
Written by William Shakespeare  Edited by Richard Burgwin
Performances  4  Where: Dowling Hall Gymnasium
Director: Richard Burgwin
Performers: Brian McCabe, Eve Anne Schneider, James McDuff, Stella Aquillina, Marie Hartnett, Patricia Joyce, Pauline Weinberger, and John Caron.

Comments:
Prof Burgwin, then of the English Dept, begins his life-long experimentation with performing Shakespeare in the 'round or at least three quarter with the audience having close contact with the play and the actors.

The one complaint that the writer from the Varsity News had in reviewing this performance was that at times the actors backs were to that part of the audience where they were seated and it was hard to hear the play at those times.

There are, it seems, several layers of this animal we call the "learning experience." For, in this case, the audiences were learning too.

Performances: 2 Where: The Music Hall - World Premiere

Director: John Lee (Professional)

Producer: Patrick J. Blaney

Publicity: William T. Rabe

Tech Dir & Stage Manager: Frank Wurtsmith

Comments: VN, William Marra: "...it was a good play. It was a successful production. And it must seem all the more excellent when we know that it was staged by a wholly extra curricular group taken right out of the student body. Ray Lagowski, Stella Aquilina, and Homer Guindon

Comments: G.J. Barry (VN) "The Players first product, PAPA IS ALL further enhances Roman Lagowski's reputation as the group's top actor, Lagowski outshines a good cast... he speaks his lines with authority, fiercely when called to. Joan Wilson and Charles Conklin were excellent foils for PAPA. Homer Guindon was very competent in his brief appearance.
"All in all it was enjoyable and we would like to see the Players

Written by William Shakespeare (Edited Version)
Performances 3  Where: Florence Ryan Auditorium (CF106)
Director: Richard J. Burgwin
Designer: Richard J. Burgwin
A.D.: William Tillman
Stage Manager: Robert Wesley

Comments: Note in folder talks of Summer Theater for 1949 VN, D.F.A. "The Players in Dick Burgwin's edition of OTHELLO, excelled themselves. In cutting (the play) the scope of the play was reduced, contrary to program promises. This OTHELLO concentrates on the 'pathos of love and death.' There were two scene stealers, Dave Culhane's inebriated Cassio and James O'Neill's ice-poisoned Iago. O'Neill did to the hilt a part that in (this) version made Iago the central character, if not the tragic figure. But Culhane, in the few scenes he had, out did himself. His rendition of the iambic pentameter (Shakespeare's and his own) was terrific... The staging, arranged on three levels, was flexible and allowed a variety of effects with minimum scene shifting..."

Comments:  W.T. Rabe (VN) "A wordy though highly successful production of "THE COMEDIAN" opened at the U-D Player's Library Theater... It tells the little-known story of Genesius, patron saint of actors.
The character is admirably portrayed by Jean Rebillot... an actor of remarkable versatility... (his) characterization on the stage is elevated above the talkative, somewhat confused role penned by author Gheon.

"Rebillot is ably assisted by his leading lady, Nancy Schumacher.
(She) effectively flits from actress-playing-her-off-stage-self, actress-acting-on-stage, and actress-being-herself. The change in approach is always evident, no mean accomplishment in this complex role. As a whole, the cast is effective. Chales Kassab, Theresa Nourie, Barbara Knowlton, and Al Daas are all noteworthy.

"Director Patrick J. Blaney keeps this all moving at a lively pace, and, just to make it a family affair, his sister, Terry Blaney has provided a highly satisfactory set. She makes excellent use of a small space to present the large Roman theater, including both stage and auditorium... this, the neatest trick of the week."

Comments: staff (VN) "DEIRDRE' IS PRAISED"

"The Players ended their current season last week-end with a very well received performance of DEIRDRE OF THE SORROWS.

"Fr. Joseph P. Owens expressed the opinion of many in a letter in which he says, 'Congratulations on your excellent production, DEIDRE OF THE SORROWS. Every one connected with the presentation deserves the highest praise for successfully attempting deep tragedy of full dramatic value in the best tradition of the classic stage...

"Patrick J. Blaney, dramatics instructor, expressed admiration for the members of the cast of DEIDRE. He stated that audiences were smaller than the quality of the performance warranted."

Comments: Andy Shaw (VN) "Marlowe's DR. FAUSTUS lends itself to imaginative staging and this fact must have been quite evident to the Players; their handsome production of DR. FAUSTUS is a joy."

"Eugene Rebillot, in the title role, delivers Marlowe's 'mighty line' with conviction and gives a splendid performance; his portrayal of pangs of conscience was gripping.

"David Culhane... actions and appearance connoted a being from the nether world quite ably... Charlene McCabe was Charlene McCabe - meaning she was very satisfactory... (she) appears in three roles and does each justice. Patricia Evens and Harold Pepper also have several roles..."

great freshness and vitality. He was agile about the stage and showed excellent timing... Cuthman's mother, a bit tipsy and extremely comic in her old age, was played magnificently by Ann Comments: VN Ted Rancont Jr: "The Players first contemporary production in a number of years makes one wonder why they have not done more modern plays. Harold Pepper... and Don MacQueen provide an evenings food for thought not soon to be forgotten. Their performances stand out in an evening of outstanding performances. Pepper... had the audience every moment he was on stage. MacQueen brought power and delicacy to (his) character especially in his interchanges with Pepper and Robert Meyers. abstract scenery, neccesary because of the small size of the stage, allows many novel but beautiful lighting effects and portrays the variant moods of the play better than could be accomplished with conventional scenery... Evelyn Shortall, convincing as a sharp

Comments:  Employed a unit set - 35 scenes, 100 characters - Designer used lighting to denote scene changes because furniture and sets did not move during the play.

VN Dorean Hurley: "Don MacQueen was spectacular, passing through one of the longest roles ever written. There was a warmth and a vigor that made the words seem to be his own... Mary Shea is immediately recognizable as the grey haired girl seen all over

Performances 4 Where: The Library Theater

Director: Richard J. Burgwin

Set Designer: Patrick J. Blaney

Costumier: Palma Martino

Student Dir: Robert Morgan Stage Manager: Carl Seech

Comments: VN Dorean Hurley: "Although the main characters in THE TAMING OF THE SHREW gave an enjoyable performance, it was the mad uproarious antics of the underlings that stole the show. The whole cast seemed to join in the infectious humor of the comedy and appeared to enjoy themselves.

"Margaret Farley proved her versatility (and) gave a good portrayal (as the Shrew)... Thomas Hughes as Baptista, the Shrew's wealthy father... Pat Gallacher as Lucentio, Candido de Leon as Gremio and Richard McKinley as Hortensio are the three suitors...

"The Shakespearean dialogue which I expected to find incongruous to the completely modern setting and costume, was instead an enjoyable contrast and grace the play the effect of being a modern comedy without changing any of the script. It confirmed the idea that Shakespearean drama was not intended for Elizabethan dress but rather for whatever period it was presented in.

"Robert Meyers and James Gannon gave fine performances... Eugene Kerwin gave the play an ease and informality... the scenery was cleverly constructed so that little time was wasted between scenes."

Performers: James Rostash, Patrick Gallacher, George Spelvin, Delphine Dubeck, Nancy White, Joseph Marrocco, Evelyn Shortall, Sylvia Lams, Eugene Jankowski, Richard McKinley, Margaret Corbett, Helen Raytis, and Ronald Uloth.

Comments: VN Dorean Hurley "RING AROUND THE MOON has two important (assets), Pat Gallacher and Evelyn Shortall. For anyone who hasn't seen one of the players productions, I'd recommend that they see this one. It is the Players at their best.

"While the production shows an enterprising teamwork, the actor and actress mentioned above stand out both in their having lead roles, and their characterizations of those roles.

"Miss Shortall carries an unusual French accented voice consistently and well throughout the play. She stands out in... her polished performance.

"Pat Gallacher, playing the roles of twins shows great adaptability in changing instantaneously from one characterization to the other. The portrayals are so opposite at would at first be imagined that this abrupt change would not be too hard, until it is realized that besides voice and posture, even gestures must be consciously changed to fit the character.

"... Nancy White and Joseph Marrocco give a fine performance in their pseudo-sophisticated dance. The humor created by this carefully executed bit of acting was well worth the countless hours the scene must have required. Margaret Corbett play(s) well within her quiet part... Delphine Dubeck rises to the appropriate hysteria ... her performance is vivid and real, if not polished."

Director: Richard J. Burgwin
Stage Manager: Joan Glinski

Performers: Caroline Arbogast, William Giovan, Katherine Miller, Donald MacQueen, Evelyn Shortall, John Arbogast, James Galvin, Margaret Farley, and Ronald Bussey.

Comments:  From the program:

"A CONCERT READING OF AGAMEMNON"

"Tonights production is an experiment in the current revival of an ancient art, that of reading aloud. Under the leadership of Charles Laughton in DON JUAN IN HELL and in JOHN BROWN'S BODY the American audience has found that reading can result in an exciting evening of theater.

"In selecting Aeschylus' great tragedy for this experiment we have been influenced by the fact that Greek drama is strongly focused on the verbal element, both in great poetry and its manner of externalizing man's mind and heart. The classical spirit looked down upon action, particularly violent action, on the stage. Their plays treated of violent subjects. But the action is offstage and reaches the audience by report. The great visual imagination at work in this technique of drama we hope to emphasize in this reading."

Joseph Marrocco, John Utz, Charles Noel, Richard McKinley, Joan Ginski, Peter Turco, John Buckley, Gail Lape, Charles Ray, Caroline Arbogast, Lawrence Carrico, Frank Spanguolo, Carl Schorn.

Comments: VN Dorean Hurley "Richard loomed large over a small house in the University Theater. Brilliant costumes, lighting, and scenery added a new quality of drama to the Shakespearian classic. Don MacQueen as Richard is dramatic and volatile, topping a difficult and encompassing role."
"Henry Bolingbroke is played by Nelson Phillips. The character of the heavy-handed man of power is forcefully played. Joan Ginski kept a composed air about her onstage even when everyone stepped on her train. This gave us a slight idea of the size of the stage even though it eminated the air of a gothic hall. Caroline Arbogast provided a facet of almost slapstick humor in her farcical pleading with King Henry for forgiveness of her son."
"The fading out of the empty throne room at the end of the play provided the perfect finish. As the players left the stage empty the lights gradually faded until a lone yellow light hovered around the empty throne. Somehow in the soft shadows the arched scenery faded into lofty majesty and became the spires and vaulted roof of a kingly lodging. It was a masterly touch."

Director: Richard J. Burgwin (Theater Director)

Designer: Daniel P. Lomax

Costume Design: Sylvia Lams

Student Director: James Rostash Stage Manager: Larry Carrico

Comments: VN Pat Gallacher: "The accent is on enjoyment, however, and there is intentionally little in the play to wrinkle the brow... a sprightly dance sequence develops from an unsuccessful attempt to remove a necklace from a maid pushing a baby carriage. Elaine Jackson, incidently, trips a light and graceful part in this sequence...

"Pat Gluntz plays with ease the designing Lady Hurf, whose cousin, Lord Edgard, done by Nelson Phillips... Margaret Farley has a convincing simplicity in her role as Juliette. Charles Noel, John Utz, and James Roland are as boisterous a set of pickpockets who ever outwitted their social superiors... the very inept Dupont-Duforts are well handled by James Gannon and Paul Morand.

"The transparent flats with triangular decorations together with the furniture and other scenery add considerably to the effect.

"THIEVES CARNIVAL provides a pleasant evening's entertainment for all who attend."

Comments: First preshow sellout in the history of Theater at the University of Detroit.

VN "Some plays are black and white. Some are cut and dried. Some leave a lot up to the ability of a group to portray the emotions and conflicts involved. Thus Graham Greene in his first play LIVING ROOM delegates a lot of responsibility to the cast, and in the University's production is returned a powerful drama that has a great deal of feeling and responsibility... The Players had a fire, a pitch in the play that tended to define and decipher Greene's meanings..."

Comments: VN, Joe Binno: "Under greasepaint and lights, the U-D Players again have produced a dramatic offering well worth their eight weeks of tireless efforts. A lively Falstaff in James Gannon proved to be as refreshing a character as ever produced by the Bard. While in dramatic presentation, Hotspur, portrayed by Charles Noel, and Henry IV, enacted by John Utz, vied for honors with their vivid portrayals.

"For their versatility Charles Seguin in his portrayal of Poins and Sir Richard Vernon with liveliness and art; Joseph Clement especially for funny Francis, the servant; Peter Turco for his many roles; Ron Bussey for his parts and particularly as the Earl of Douglas, a villain played with seldom seen gusto..."

"In between are the humorous antics of the overstuffed Falstaff and Prince Hal, depicted by Nelson Phillips, to relieve somewhat, the tense situations built up by the intrigues...

"... a romantic touch... was provided by... Gail Lape, who never says one word in English - but what she says in Welsh is quite plain. Her song leaves one almost breathless."

VN, Joe Binno: "Jeri Burgwin and Dan Lomax really put forth their best talents in their respective fields of costuming and set

Student Director: Nelson Phillips Stage Manager: Joseph Clement

Comments: don fermoyle (VN) "Janet Fenimore handles the female lead in a convincing manner and the part of the manager is ably handled by Patrick Gallacher. Perhaps the funniest person in the whole play is the saucer-eyed George Lewis portrayed by Douglas Foote.

"Nelson Phillips is also good as the ranting, tyrannical producer, Herman Glogauer. The snobbish Helen Hobart is an early example of the venom-tongued gossip columnist. Exhibiting this type is Alice Broder. William Giovan does a worthy portrayal of a writer drained of his creative blood by the talent wasting industry.

"The play is an entertaining one and a good example of farce comedy. The University Theater can be proud of its first effort of the new season."

Comments: Bill Armstrong (VN) "HENRY V', VICTORIOUS" "With excellent lighting and good costuming, the U-D PLayers brought old Henry back to life for a few entertaininh hours last night. They made him look pretty good.

"The first figure seen is the chorus competently done by Charles Noel. He is the connector between audience and stage... Individual performances by the Players show a rather well proportioned continuity for which Shakespeare cannot actually be given full credit. Director Richard Burgwin's deft hand can be seen in the sometimes underplayed but never overacted portrayal of historic figures. It is to his credit and to the credit of such players as Nelson Phillips and Bill Giovan that the dialogue remains understandable and convincing, and never descends to meaningless rhetoric.

"... certain highlights in the show (like) the comic relief of Douglas Fonte ... and Michael Keenan... help keep things on an even level. Another highlight is the performance of Dennis Moffett...
Peter Turco and Joan Glinski... offer fine support..."

Hugh Scullen, Patrick McNally, and Thomas O'Rourke.

Comments: Paul Morand (VN) "The U-D Players successfully translated a difficult text, full of Elizabethan wit and spotted with topical illusions, into a lively, understandable, and very enjoyable comedy.

"Berowne was the most lyrical in expression, witty in rejoinder, imaginative in rationalization, and gallant in action. Dennis Moffett excellently portrayed Berowne with elegant style and boundless energy. Bill Giovan took the role of the fantastic Spaniard, Don Adriano, and played it to the hilt. Moth, his precocious page, was handled nicely by Charles Anderson.

"Holofernes was played successfully by Patrick McNally... The clown, Costard, was played with well directed energy by Douglas Fonte. The wrench for whom he and Aramondo pined was played fetchingly by newcomer Mary Ann Stanley. Michael Keenan drew good audience reaction... Tom Preston did a good job in the difficult role as Boyet, the French Lord."

Comments: jim o'killop (VN) "SUPERB THEATER"

"The Players performances were uniformly accomplished and convincing. Robert Hachlinski was capable as James, the central character. Sterling performances were given by Patti Cassell and Alice Broder.

"With every appearance on stage our admiration for Miss Broder grows. She is a definite asset to any dramatic production.

"Some fine character acting was exhibited by William Giovan, Joyce Shaheen, and Kathleen Maskery.

"One of the striking aspects of the performance was the sets. They went from exquisite to the drab to the downright dreary all in less time than it takes to smoke a Marlboro. Considering the play, or the acting, or even just the settings, it is well worth you while to gambol over to the ticket office and get one for tonight or tomorrow - if you still can..."

Student Director: Paul Morand

Stage Manager: Sharon Ranucci

Performers: Dennis Moffett, Michael Keenan, Richard Burgwin, Alice Broder, Margaret Manion, Julie McCarthy, Frances Dunbar, Thomas Preston, and James Savedes.

Comments: The Playbill for this play contained a sheet asking for suggestions for the following year's season: Four offering to include one Shakespeare, one Shaw, one classic, one modern type play.

"Ray Madden" (VN) "Crisp, witty dialogue by the author, coupled with good timing and delivery by most of the cast gave the opening night viewers a truly entertaining three hours.

"Casting was a paramount problem and was admirably handled by the selection of effective and convincing actors. The male lead went to faculty member and director of the Players, Richard Burgwin. His performance was polished and brilliant. His deep, articulate voice lent clarity to the dialogue and his presence on stage seemed to lend confidence to the others.

"Dennis Moffet's portrayal of Algy was delightful. The pompous - even bombastic - Lady Bracknell was convincingly portrayed by Alice Broder. The delicate beauty and catchy wit of Cecily Cardew was commendably played by Francis Dunbar. Thomas Preston handled his part with ease. Supporting roles by William Giovvin and James Savedes added an extra spark of fun to the performance."

Written by William Saroyan

Performances 4 Where: Library Theater
Director: Mr. Richard Burgwin

Stage Manager: Nary Doyle

Performers: Richard Ramos, Rick Janci, Alice Broder, Patti Cassell, Gerald Waechter, Mike Keenan, and Jim Savedes, Joyce Shaheen, Tom O'Rourke, Sharon Ranucci, and Daniel Brown.

Comments: Tom Mahoney (VN) "... Dick Ramos has his moments of poignance and dignity from the ashes of failure. He registers disgust with himself and exasperation at womankind in superior fashion... Rick Janci, had the difficult task of doing something new with the stereotype role of the ex-boxer. Without resorting to Brando-ish means, Janci gave an excellent performance. His voice was as dead and flat as any you will hear along Skid Row.

"Another well-worn type, that of the impoverished stage queen, was handled feelingly and convincingly by Alice Broder... Patti Cassell was properly stunned and shy as one would expect of a girl whose total stage experience was that of pledging allegiance to the flag.
Some of the best dialogue and delivery came from Gerald Waechter...
Mike Keenan, despite his role as straightman to the bear, came through often enough to make the character stick in one's mind. The bear, played by James Savedes, was subdued and the temptation to ham it up was resisted successfully.

"The efforts of Mr. Burgwin's direction were fruitful and yielded above average performances. Mr. Lomax for once in his career had the chance to design a stage within a stage and did so with versimilitude."

Comments: "PLAYERS HAVE A BALL WITH MOLIERE'S COMEDY" (VN 12-12-58)

"Several dozen of the unbiversity's talented young folks got together Wednesday night to serve up a delightful interpretation of Moliere's 'School for Husbands.'

"Bob Hachlinski plays Sganarelle with a vengeance... Fran Dunbar is a study in virginal innocence mixed with a fine Machiavellian flair for getting her own way... Paul Morand's portrayal carried a fine sense of humor to relieve his protestations of love... Patti Cassell does a slick job... and in a play studded with first rate acting jobs Lynn LeVasseur more than held her own.

"By the time Sganarellla finishes his prologue, the audience is put into the proper frame of mind to accept this 17th century comedy with the proper attitude (and) several grains of salt.

"The play was directed by Evelyn MacQueen who successfully exploited the abundance of talent at her disposal." VN, Tom Mahoney

"FULL HOUSE ACCLAIMS PLAYERS' `ST. JOAN'"
"Janyce Byrne's conception of St. Joan was convincing and moving. What is important, I think, is that it was original and not a copy of earlier performances. She was magnificent in the trial scene... James Savedes, who has the uncanny knack of playing the buffoon of creating personality on stage, was hilariously funny and extremely capable as the dauphin... a most stirring performance was given by Dan Brown... excellent supporting characterizations in lesser roles were given by Bob Hachlinski, Richard Ramos, and John Storto... It was an entertaining evening of theater. Dan Lomax's imaginative sets and costumes lent much to the production of a great play well done."

VN (April 24, 1959) by Brian Murphy "EXCELLENT 'GARDEN' CLIMAXES SEASON"

"The U-D Players did their usual good job with a very difficult play, THE CHALK GARDEN, by Enid Bagnold. It was witty, as only English comedy can be, and the laughs came primarily because of the excellent job Alice Broder did... Patti Cassell was effective as her retarded and paradoxically, precocious granddaughter. Fred West gripped and stumbled about the stage as the perplexed butler. But Joyce Shaheen turned in the best acting performance of the evening with her dipication of the mysterious and secretive Miss Madrigal... All in all it was an excellent production - perhaps more excellent than the play deserved."

Joseph Mossman (DN) "... gave a highly competent performance... director MacQueen moved the show at a highly satisfactory pace... Fred West, notably good as an ex-convict butler..."

Brian Murphy (VN) "PLAYERS PAINT `WAGON' WELL"
"...the play... is an entertaining combination of humor and music, most of which came off rather well.

"Dick Ramos (as Ben Rumson) was excellent. Joyce Shaheen portrayed his daughter. Both she and Mr. Ramos sing suprising well. Her acting was sensitive and most effective.

"If I had to pick the most profesional actor in the play, I would choose Robert Hachlinski. His was certainly the most difficult role and he handled both the acting and singing in a thoroughly professional fashion. There is absolutely no doubt that the funniest part of the whole play was the fighting and `praying' of the two wives (Janyce Byrne and Frances Corrigan). Special mention should be made of Michael Keenan and Fred West who took difficult dialect roles and were quite believable as an Irishman and Cockney.

I can't offer enough admiration to Mrs. MacQueen (the director) who took an extraordinary difficult play to do and turned out a polished, and really entertaining piece... Mrs. MacQueen can justifiably pat `himself' (sic) on the back."

Performances 8 Where: The Library Theater (Third Floor)

Director: Evelyn MacQueen

Designer: Daniel P. Lomax Costumes: Mary Alice Doyle

Student Director: Sharon Ranucci Stage Manager: Anita E. Truhon

Comments: Brian Murphy (VN) "Everything about this production was superb, from the original idea of interpretation by Mrs. MacQueen to the stark sets of Mr. Lomax - yes, even to the Gregorian chant-ish singing of Mr. James Reese. The handling of the play, in addition to the tongue-in-cheek business was excellent. The accent was on the fine costumes of Miss Doyle, and the set fits in well without distraction.

"I hate to single out individuals for commendation because everyone in the cast was superb. But... congratulations are due to Mr. Savedes who, in this play, WAS his 'usual show-stealing self. Messrs. Stumpo and Shorto were simply great as the two gentlemen. Mr. Ramos was, as usual, at the top of the list in order for plaudits. Miss Alicia Annis played Julia with absurdly overdone expression, and her mocking of her part came off better than anyone's. My hat is off to Charlie Anderson and Dan Brown... The showstealer of this play was Thomas Pazik, who played 'Crab.' Miss Corrigan and Miss Dotterweich were perfect as Silvia and Lucetta, respectively.

"What I liked most of all about this presentation was the feeling of intimacy between the players and the audience. It's a little jarring at first when the actor practically sits next to you and tells you about himself, but you get used to this quickly. Mrs. MacQueen has made wide use of both Shakespeare's soliloquies and the smallness of the University Theater (which is not nearly as pretentious as it sounds)."

A.D.: Stage Manager:

Performers: Charles Noel, Bill Giovan, Frances Dunbar, Caroline Arbogast, James Savedes, Jan Conway, Bob McGill, Edward LaCasse, and Bill Grigalunas.

Comments: News article carried the story that Director Burgwin had to have the Fisher Fountain left on for the performances. Seems that on the opening night when they shut off at 10:45 P.M. the audience noticed the sudden drop in noise level and were all asking "What's that...?" and completely lost the play for a few minutes.

J. Dorsey Callaghan (DFP) "It's difficult for one to view objectively a work of literary art which has remained a sturdy personal favorite through a long vista of memory... The festival cast is fortunate in the charm which the women members bestow upon it. Frances Dunbar is the romantic daughter, with Caroline Arbogast as the mother and Jan Conway as the maid..."

Josef Mossman (DN) "ARMS AND THE MAN is one of two plays being presented in the U-D Repertory Festival... this bold and impressive experiment. Evelyn S. MacQueen's direction allowed for skillfully rationed attitudinizng to accent characterization. The staging was pacing to make (it) a delightful comedy first, a social document second, which is the proper order in the theater.

"The U-D performers have learned the vital fact that it's of no use for a playwright to create immortal lines if those lines are not communicated to the audience. And so the cast spoke for Shaw with clarity and blessed audibility.

"Charles Noel gave a humorous, thoughtful and penetrating portrayal... Frances Dunbar was charming and funny... other splendid performances were given by Caroline Arbogast..., James Savedes...,William Giovan..., and Robert McGill."

Comments: Player Associates, a group of Alumni, underwrote the expenses of the Summer Season. The University was not financially responsible.

Frank P. Gill (Detroit Times) "It was, in short, one of the most energetic evenings in the theater we have witnessed for some time... There is wisdom in Richard J. Burgwin's efforts to keep the play moving, for the hodge-podge of confusing acnes designed to unravel the political implications in the plot, can become dreary if paced too slow. Professional productions in the past have proved this more than once... this production (is)far above average... it had imaginative consistencey, and some excellent performances...

"As Antony, Richard Ramos dominated the stage with a virile and aggressive performance... Joyce Shaheen had all the charm, and delicate quality of the child queen... Thomas St. Charles gave a very strong and poignant interpretation as Enobarbus...

Comments: James S. Pooler, (DFP) "U-D PLAYERS MASTER THE LONG-WINDED O'NEILL"

"Whenever we see a play by the great Eugene O'Neill we admire any actor who can remember all his lines. The University of Detroit Repertory Theater carried off the feat to fine distinction...when it gave rich warmth to the MIDwestern Premiere of TOUCH OF THE POET.

"It was an ambitious project...but it turned into one of those charmed nights. When the curtain went up there was the perfect setting by Mary Alice Doyle. The players came on and shortly there was perfect rapport between players and audience, and Eugene O'Neill's TOUCH OF THE POET was registered home in your heart and memory.

"We must doff our old hat to Thomas St. Charles for remembering every line in what is one of the longest parts in theater. Alice Broder gave a magnificent performance as the wife, as did Aileen Campbell as the daughter. Director Evelyn MacQueen showed the fine touch of complete understanding."

Joseff Mossman (DN) "The tavern that is the scene...was abit too neat and fresh, but the splendid acting compensated...the cast was extraordinary in its understanding and projection of the grotesque madness...Thomas St. Charles gave a remarkably credible portrayal as did Aileen Campbell, Alice Broder, Gary Schaub, John Macunovich and a gang of barroom roisterers who were probably the most effective offstage voices in theater history."

Comments: Jimmy Pooler, (DFP) "THE PLAY'S THE THING AT U-D"
"This play will always be new to many a Shakespearian student, and these young university Players, directed by Richard Burgwin, breathed fire into it - for while they lose none of the delicious cadence of Shakespeare, they escape that dreadful pitfall of amateur theater in losing the memory of the song..."

Josef Mossman (DN) "The presentation of MEASURE FOR MEASURE is truly brilliant visually, with ingenious use of effective set pieces against a scarlet background. Costumes were colorful and impressive... (in the direction by) Richard J. Burgwin, pace and style are pre-eminent... It moved rapidly and convincingly in the portrayals of U-D performers... in the difficult role of Isabella was Alicia Annas... consistently intelligent and charming. Thomas Stumpo played Angelo with a quiet strength that was impressively compelling. "Noteworthy portrayals also were given by Paul McGaffey as Lucio, Joseph Buch as the Duke of Vienna, Robert McGill as Elbow the constable, Elizabeth Polk as Mistress Overdone, Kaye Albert as Mariana and many others."

William Giovann (Michigan Daily) "Director Richard Burgwin took advantage of the intimacy of the theater by occasionally bringing the actors down into the audience... The performance contained several well executed characterizations in smaller roles... Paul McGaffey... and newcomer Oliver Glenn connected as a rather rotund and mirthful bawd. A functional, versatile set permitted a fluid shift of action from scene to scene."

Comments: MichCath "U-D REP CAST TOPS IN SHAW PLAY"

Joseff Mossman (DN) "In its presentation of Shaw's comedy, MAN AND SUPERMAN, last night the University of Detroit Theater has achieved the third triumph of its challenging repertory program... the U-D cast handled its talk with a lithe, brisk pace that made Shaw's wit glitter as brightly and stab as deep as it did in 1903.

"The women of the cast were stunningly attractive in their turn-of-the-century costumes, and the sets, done in the modest tradition of U-D theater, were as graphic and gratifying as more elaborate productions. Evelyn S. MacQueen's direction gave the play clarity and cohesion.

"The role of Jack Tanner was played by Frederick Janci in a virtuoso demonstration of acting. Tanner was Shaw's mouthpiece and Janci served Shaw splendidly in the communication of his ideas. The girls who were irresistible in looks and invincible in dominating their men were Jean Tomassini and Patricia Morouse, both wonderful in the ways they charmed their prey into submission.

"The performance included numerous other superb portrayals, among them Robert McGill... James Savedes... Carole Case... Douglas Fonte, Michael McKeown, Richard Ramos, Jean Dotterweich, and Patricia Menendez."

"A presentation of such excellence as MAN AND SUPERMAN takes the repertory project out of experimental rating and establishes it as a distinct theater triumph."

Title: FAUST, PART I

Written by Goethe

Performances 7 Where: Library Theater (Third Floor)

Director: Dr. Richard J. Burgwin

Set Design: Daniel P. Lomax

Costume Design: Mary Alice Doyle

Student Director: Stage Manager:

Performers: Richard Ramos, Paul McGaffey, Mahalla Lenzi,

Comments: Joseph Mossman (DN) "U-D THEATER FALTERS WITH FAUST."
"The presentation of the great classic was achieved with honor and dignity, if not with the impact and effectiveness of the other productions in the repertory. But... the fault (is not totally) with the U-D Theater, considering the excellence of individual portrayals, the remarkably effective staging by Dr. Richard Burgwin, the economy of physical props - in the sense of supports not properties - which permitted splendid freedom of movement and soaring illusion... with gauze, screens, lighting, and with silhouetted pantomime and tableau, many memorable theatrical moments were achieved..."

Louis Cook (DFP) "U-D THEATER FAUST POWERFUL."
"Only a Jesuit school such as U-D could have produced such a charming and convincing Satan... the play comes along like a rare sirloin to a starving man... Ramos is a fine Faust, a truly human figure whose vision of purity is muddled by passion... Miss Lenzi shows good understanding of the role, with a lovely, sensitive face in which the wide range of moods are mirrored like successive images of sunlight and storm clouds passing over a clear pool of spring water... the play has a large cast and a variety of ingenious settings, all the more remarkable for the lack of stage settings..."

Title: THE MISANTHROPE
Written by Moliere
Performances 8    Where: Festival Tent - Fisher Fountain Square
Director: Dr. Richard J. Burgwin
Set Design: Daniel P. Lomax
Costume Design: Mary Alice Doyle
A.D.:    Stage Manager:

Comments: Josef Mossman (DN) "Moliere's MISANTHROPE is a remarkable achievement of the university theater. In fact, it might be called an achievement of the impossible, for Moliere has long defied representation in American theater and in translation from the French. Under the direction of Richard J. Burgwin, (it) has it's bittersweet say eloquently and pointedly. (Moliere) examined the question with biting satire and penetrating wit, and so have the U-D Players understood his purpose that the comedy emerges with sharp-lined clarity in which possible hurdles of translation from another language vanish."

"Robert Hachlinski gives a portrayal that is a penetrating study of the character's paradoxical qualities, comic and pitiable, sympathetic and repugnant. The girls in MISANTHROPE are delightful, especially a blond enchantress named Marcia Stevens, who plays Celimene with sparkling wit, glowing personality and skillful use of her voice... The show also includes telling portrayals by Robert McGill, Thomas St. Charles, Patrick McElroy, and F. Douglas Fonte as amusing noblemen."

Collins George (DFP) "PLAYERS REFLECT WIT OF MOLIERE"
"... Richard Burgwin, the director of (the) play, manages to portray all the paradoxes of Moliere's wit on the smallest of stages with the bare minimum of scenery... Robert Hachlinski brought a fanaticism to his portrayal of the title role which made the character seem almost a madman, an involuntary one, enslaved by his own undeviating logic... Caroline Arbogast gave a fine acting performance though she is far too attractive to make believable her role as a rejected woman."

Performances 8 Where: Under Festival Tent - Fisher Square

Director: Evelyn MacQueen

Set Design: Daniel P. Lomax

Costume Design: Mary Alice Doyle

A.D.: Stage Manager:

Comments: Joseph Mossman, (DN) "One of the best things about 'TAMING OF THE SHREW' is that Shakespeare is good enough for the U-D Theater. There has been no attempt to 'update' or 'modernize' or turn it into an apologetic version of 'Gunsmoke.'

"Charles Noel is a roaring, lusty Petrucho, wringing the role for all its hilarious deviltry and ribaldry. Mahalla Lenzi is a Kate of minxish charm... the crowd scenes are handled with such skill that seeming chaos is fully controlled and wholly effective."

Collins George (DFP) "U-D 'SHREW' IS A SCREAM"

"Shakespeare's TAMING... is one of the greatest farces ever written, and the U-D Players manage to draw out all the fun and laughter inherent in the play. The performance is one which needs bow to none of the better Shakespeare festivals. It proves once again that a large stage, expensive scenery and elaborate machines are no more necessary than in Shakespeare's time IF the acting and the directing are first rate.

"A large cast is called for but so swift is the pace of the play and so skillfully are the actors manipulated that there is never a sense of over-crowding on the small stage.

"Kaye Albert is lovely... Michael Keenan and Michael McKeown turn in excellent performances... Robert McGill turns in an even better performance in the comedy as the harassed father of the two girls.

"Trumpeters on the roof of the U-D Library, in the manner of festivals everywhere, summon the audience to the theater tent when the performance is about to begin. The summons is one which the performance more than justifies."

TITLE:       MAN AND SUPERMAN

Performances  8       Where: Under the Tent (Fisher Quad)

Director:       Evelyn MacQueen

Costume Design: Mary Alice Doyle

A.D.:          Stage Manager:

Performers:       Pat Morouse, Frederick Janci, Jean Tomasini, Robert McGill, James Savedes, Carole Case, Douglas Fonte, Michael McKeown, Richard Ramos, Jean Dotterweich, and Patricia Menendez.

Comments: The regular season's performances of MAN AND SUPERMAN were completely sold out so the play was brought back to the Summer Repertory Season. It was again 'SRO!'

Louis Cook (DFP) "There's something awful about seeing a man dragged off into marriage against his will and better judgement. In the case of the play MAN AND....... at the U-D Theater, a fellow can keep saying to himself it's just a play... just a play... But sometimes it seems quite real. With George Bernard Shaw writing the lines and the U-D players speaking them, it all seems too true, between the belly laughs. The young players have a great time with (the play) and they do it well.

"Frederick Janci plays the part of Superman with the horrified fascination of a man listening to himself die through his own stethoscope. The pain is made somewhat bearable by the huntress, a pretty doll named Jean Tomassini.

There is a secondary story running through the play which almost overpowers the primary, largely because of the pleasant talents of Patricia Morouse... Robert McGill is very funny as the hypnotized rabbit who yearns to be crushed in Miss Tomassini's coils. He is discarded in favor of bigger game."

(MichCath)"... another masterful achievement... the cast almost without exception was superb... Outstanding in his role as John Tanner was Frederick Janci, who handled his difficult lines with complete mastery."

Title:  THE BIRDS

Written by  Aristophanes  Version by Walter Kerr
Performances  10  Where:  The Library Theater
Director:  Evelyn MacQueen
Musical Score:  Richard Bennet  Choreographed by Kaye Albert
Set Design:  Daniel P. Lomax  Costume Design:  Mary Alice Doyle
Student Director:  Gary Schaub  Stage Manager:  Mary Mudge

Performers:  Paul McGaffey, John Macunovich, Robert Hachlinski, Patrick McElroy, Alice Broder, Jean Dotterwick, Marcia Stevens, Aileen Campbell, Mark White, Richard Kordos, Thomas St. Charles, Nancy Charbonneau, Robert E. McGill, Edwin Goodwin, Robert Kovac, Thomas Manning, Gary Schaub, William Check, Donald Kolke, Michael Irlbacher, A. Robert Jablonski, Carole Case, Roger Bodo, Sandra Manning, Barbara Lanctot, Mary Alice Duquette, Linda Yankovic, Bernard English, and Richard Janson.

Comments:  Josef Mossman (DN) "THE BIRDS was presented in an ecstatically free adaptation. Evelyn MacQueen's direction extracted a zany joy from the script, and an enchanting jazz score by Thomas Bennett, director of the U-D program service, added to the delight of the performance. Thomas A. St. Charles and Robert E. McGill... arised the hilarious laughter that is the just reward of wonderfully gifted clowns. John Macunovich and Nancy Charbonneau head the contingent of agile, uproarious birds. To see the birds join in a conga line to Bennett's music was an experience to be cherished."

(MichCath) "Typical of directess Evelyn MacQueen's approach to THE BIRDS is the incidental music she had Tom Bennett compose entitled, of course, 'Jazz for the Birds.' In the course of the evening the audience was also treated to a conga line, buck and wing dance, and a Greek attired in a `King of the Bar-B-Que' apron as he prepares a feast to tempt the gods.

"Bob McGill and Thomas St. Charles are a pair of Laurel and Hardy-type comics who run away with the show. The assortment of birds in vivid wings and funny masks bound on the stage, enter via a sliding board, and bounce around on assorted trampolines, swings, and perches."

Written by Racine Translated by Kenneth Muir

Performances 8 Where: The Library Theater

Director: Dr. Richard J Burgwin

Designer: Daniel P. Lomax

Costume Design: Mary Alice Doyle

Student Director: Gary Schaub Stage Manager: Mary Mudge

Comments: The faculty paper hatched a controversy on just what this really play meant. One faculty member thought it pretentious AND yet simple minded. "what are these people trying to say?" The Modern Languages and Philosophy people (Dr. Maloney among them) hopped all over this question with the "estetics of the ancients and it adaptability to this crazy mixed up modern world" line.

Josef Mossman (DN) "Alice Broder gave a portrayal of the title role that had supreme dignity and craft. Paul McGaffey was splendid in the difficult role of Orestes. There were portrayals of notable excellence of Robert Hachlinski, Marcia Stevens, John Macunovich, Patrick MacElroy, Jean Dotterweich and Aileen Campbell. The direction by Richard J. Burgwin showed, as usual, authority and understanding."

(MichCath) "ANDROMCHE is a 'hard' play - hard on the actors and the audience. In the high style interpretation given by Director Richard J. Burgwin, the actors move on a grander scale, and become noble, even in their baseness."

Performances 9 Where: Library Theater

Director: Evelyn MacQueen

Designer: Daniel P. Lomax

Costume Design: Mary Alice Doyle

Student Director: Anita Truhon

Stage Manager: John Linahan

Light Chief: Charles Ray

Sound: Mary Alice Duquette

Comments: James Pooler, (DFP) "‘LEAR' A TRIUMPH FOR U-D PLAYERS" "It's quite a trick for youth to plumb deep tragedy. But that's what the U-D Rep Theater as done with ‘KING LEAR.' As Lear, Richard J. Burgwin was great. The inspiration and fire was there - and due to the sure hand of director Evelyn MacQueen, there was movement, characterization, truth, poetry, and feeling... she retained the simplicity of the Globe and made the unstageable 'LEAR' eminently stageable. The words were Shakespeare's, but the triumph belonged to this exceptionally fine group of players."

Josef Mossman (DN) "Because the theater facilities on the third floor of the library are something less than lavish, emphasis was placed on performance rather than production, and the result was splendid theater.

"Dr. Richard J. Burgwin took the title role and gave Lear a rare sympathy and significance. Too often Lear is portrayed as a bumbling old fool bereft of manliness. But, after all, Lear was a King, and Burgwin's interpretation never ignored that fact. "This old majesty," as the Duke of Albany, called him, was ever present. The scenes in which madness beset the throneless old king were a controlled and reasonable portrait of a man worn out in body and mind... directed by Evelyn S. MacQueen, who has paced it for both understanding and dramatic impact. Her staging of the battle scene was brilliant inspiration."

Comments: Joseph Mossman (DN) "The direction of Evelyn MacQueen introduced some interesting and diverting bits of business to combat the often static qualities of (this) play.

"Seamus T. O'Brien... gave a brilliant performance. Alicia Annas was the Major Barbara of the title, and... made the role credible and charming and altogether good theater.

"It is not likey that any performer has given a more incisive portrayal of Lady Brittomart than Beverly Markowitz did. This was comedy at its highest.

"The performance was full of fine portrayals, but no cast can outlast Shaw."

Comments: Joseph Mossman (DN) "The University of Detroit Rep Theater last night showed how to make "Hamlet" a thrilling, gripping evening in the theater.

"You begin with a great play, of course. You cast in down to the bit parts, with people who are exactly right for their roles, or with the acting gifts to make them seem so.

"You costume it with gorgeous brilliance and light it with a genius for seeking out its every facet of theatrical validity.

"Dr. Richard Burgwin is taking his leave of the University of Detroit soon to join the Northwestern University faculty. His farewell is a production of "Hamlet" so good that it cannot be discussed in terms that distinguish between professional and amateur theater.

"While pilgramages are made all summer long to faraway places to pay homage to Shakespeare, one of the finest Shakespearean performances of any season, is now to be found on the U-D campus.

"A University theater should not have a star, but in the case of this Hamlet... it couldn't help itself. In the title role was Robert McGill... His Hamlet was a portrayal of unassailable intelligence, but better than that, it was one of shattering emotional impact that often seemed to rock the destival tent...

"... Emily Giaccobazzi, as Ophelia, beguiled the audience..."

  "Under the direction of Evelyn S. MacQueen, a light touch and a sensitive approach were blended to bring out the frivolous and serious episodes of the play to good advantage.
  "The witty fencing and banter by Frances Dunbar and Charles Noel... were done with charm and vivacious interpretation. As the more serious couple, Hero and Claudio, good performances were given by Nancy Carbonneau and Mark White.

VN (11-20-64) "The plastic face of Paul Devlin, Arts Junior, fit well into the role of the pompous Arnolphe. Katherine Mulvey, Player associate, takes the awards for best performance of the evening as the innocent and naive Agnes. Vacant stares and quavering voice were very apropos to the character of the convent-educated maiden. Titters of anticipation ran through the audience at the frequent appearances of the two servants played by Roslyn Hayward, Arts freshman, and Dominic Missimi, Arts junior. The wacky couple provided many of the comic highlights of the play with their bungling ineptitude."

Comments:
Jay Carr (DN) "... meat and drink for the reflective mind..."

VN (March 9, 1965) Sally DeRonne "A unique opening for the play brings the audience into the action and sets the mood of a play within a play. The actors begin to set up the world (a travelling circus) before the actual beginning of the drama. The strange goings on attract and hold the attention of the audience.

"The outstanding performance of the evening was given by the lead actor, Charles Noel.... Noel's interpretation of the role was accomplished with an effective balance of patience and strength. His transition from happy family man to outcast is excellent. Patricia Flynn... touched the audience with her compassionate performance. One could say that God (Dominic Missimi) gave a good performance but in this case 'good' is inadequate."

Per James Rodgers: (VN 4-9-65) "The complexity of the circus set was a major accomplishment for us especially on our small stage. The fall of the backdrop, the light cues, the smoke screen involved in the city destruction scene were very hard to pull off on our stage, but they were the best in the play... we owe this accomplishment to Bert Ronke...."

NOTE: J.B. was completely sold out during entire run.

Title: MISALLIANCE

Performances 12 Where: The Library Theater (Third Floor)

Director: Alan Jorgensen

Designer: Albert Ronke

Costume Design:

A.D.: Patrick McGuire Make-Up: Sister Bernadette Marie

Stage Manager: Charles Derry Properties: Roslyn Hayward

Performers: (9) Tom St. Charles, Kathy Marshall, Fran Loverde, Kelly Burke, Tom Marsh, Mary Alice Duquette, Mike Irlbacher, Seamus O'Brien, and Jay Zink.

Comments:

VN (March 9, 1965) "Last Friday night, there was a grand theft perpetrated in the U-D Theater. The object stolen was George Bernard Shaw's 'MISALLIANCE' and the culprit was a shifty, funny little character with beady eyes. His name, Jay Zink. Mr. Zink portrayed Bentley Summerhays with delightful brightness and zest which kept the comedy at a fever pitch during the tights ripping, line dropping opening night... inspired direction of Alan Jorgenson. MISALLIANCE is undoubtedly, the funnest evening you will spend in a long time... an enormous success. Don't miss it."

Per Tom Marsh Players Publicist... everything went wrong during the run of this play, from replacement of actors, to chairs disintegrating, cages falling over, props being missing, pants splitting... "but the show must go on!" and it did to good reviews.

Comments: VN (Dick McKnight and Gail Horan) "... led in excellence by Kelly Burke as the immature and lusty Paris and James Egan as the tragically romantic poet Demekos, the entire cast, down to the child actress Margaret Linahan as Polyxene carried out an exercise in fate. While Charles Noel in the lead role of Hector, Emily Haggarty, Patricia Flynn, and Dee Egan were consistently good throughout the two act production.

"Dominic Missimi, as the drunken Ajax...turned in a sterling performance as he displayed both cowardice and lust in his advances toward Andromache... Caroline Arbogast evoked frequent laughs from the audience with her shrill voice and biting humor..."

"A scene just before the ending, between Hector and Ullyses, explains Jean Giradoux's prophecy for the world. Written in 1935, the prophecy is frighteningly real in the context of today's world."

(Sister Marie Bernadette). She was a full-time student enrolled by her order in Theater Arts to aid her mission of teaching young children. The University and Sister Bernadette had received the necessary permission for her to play the part from her Order and the local Bishop (Cardinal Deardon) and were two days away from opening night when a telegram was received from the Vatican in Rome forbidding her to go on. In the true "spirit of the boards," Emily Haggerty of Mercy College stepped in and gave a bravura performance as her substitute.

Comments: Jay Carr (DN) "NUN'S STAND-IN VIVACIOUS IN U-D VENETIAN FARCE" "Emily Haggerty... was not tentative... she swash-buckled her way through... this was a very good show under trying circumstances..."

Stage Manager: John Helie

Performers: Julie Brown, Kathleen Marshall, Perry Mallette, Robert Hachlinski, Louise Martin, John Thackaberry, Charles Noel, Richard J. MacDonald, Catherine Allam, and Richard Barber.

Comments: Ernest Gilbert (DN) "'EVERYTHING IN GARDEN' MISSES"
"The University of Detroit Theater 113 opened its new season last night with Edward Albee's adaptation of Giles Cooper's EVERYTHING IN THE GARDEN. The production did not alter the impression that the Albee version neither transcends not enhances the original English product. It is a fuzzy likeness of a flat play."

Harvey Taylor (DPP) "ALBEE PLAY'S NOT SO MINOR IN HANDS OF UOFD THEATER"  "Albee's EVERYTHING IN THE GARDEN has long been dismissed by critics as one of his 'minor' efforts. But is it really?

"I saw it for the first time at the UofD Theater the other night and found it fascinating, sublimely cynical and strangely disturbing.
In all honesty, it must be reported that 'minor' works don't have this effect.

"The central characters are played with consistant authority by Kathleen Marshall and Perry Mallette, both of whom manage to be not only credible but extremely attractive people... another outstanding performer was Robert Hachlinski..."

A.D.: Patricia Sherrod Stage Manager: Kathleen Vance

Performers: Michael Routh, Kathleen Korzym, Shanna Hamilton, Mary Jo Alexander, Kathleen Vance, Elke Vrabel, Jim Kendall, Mary Boyer, Mary Aufman, Neil Thackaberry, Linn Forhan, Marc McCulloch, Stephen Guntli, Linda Warren, Bill Luberda, Paul Silverman, and Seamus O'Brien.

Comments: Jay Gill (DN) "Most of the empathy generated last evening was due to the powerful and sensitive projection of the part of Proctor by Neil Thackaberry. This was a full bodied, toweringly scaled acting job that transcended everything around it... he is given good support by Mary Jo Alexander and Seamus O'Brien. Director James Rodgers maintained a consistency of mood throughout, appropriate to the dim lighting and deep-hueded sets."

VN (?) "THE CRUCIBLE -- LYRICAL MASTERPIECE" "... Neil Thackaberry gives a crowning performance, but the most effective thing about the play is the way the cast works together... is handled with grace and skill by Linda Warren... Mary Jo Alexander gives a good performance as the vindictive Abigail... Stev Guntli penetrates his very important role to the core as Rev. Hale... Lynn Forhan probably comes closest to stealing the female spotlight..."

F.G.Martin (Mich Cath) "There are few if any weaknesses in this entire production. The hysteria of the girls sets your nerves on edge and Michael Routh's Rev. Parris really get your back up, but that's the way it's supposed to be."

Stage Manager: Candice Kollar A.S.M.: Shanna Hamilton

Performers: Maureen Kelly, Kathleen Korzym, A. Neil Thackaberry, Patricia Conn, Stephen Guntli, Dominic Kline, Sidney Skipper,

Robert Hohl, and Marc McCulloch

Comments: Harvey Taylor (DFP) "Despite the obvious youthfulness of its cast and some drastic 'modernization' by director Dominic Missimi, ANTIGONE at the University of Detroit Theater emerges as a performance of dignity and persuasiveness... the cast performs firmly and convincingly. And Missimi makes no mistake in his direction... Maureen Kelly... as Antigone, is a strong and eloquent figure... A. Neil Thackaberry is again authoritative as Creon... other key roles were well taken by Stephen Guntli... Robert Hohl... Marc McCulloch, Kathleen Korzym and Patricia Conn..."

E.J. Gill (DN) "All around, this ANTIGONE is an effective adaptation and an interesting show to watch. It is due for a tour of area schools and should make a positive impression on student audiences."

Set Design: James W. Miller Costumes by Nancy Missimi

Choreography: Dominic Missimi and Evelyn Kreason

A.D.: Michael Walczak Stage Manager: A. Neil Thackaberry

Comments: Jay Carr (DN) "BOYFRIEND' IS A BOUNCY ROMP"
"THE BOYFRIEND sits attractively in a small house, and last night it was a little sweetheart of a show, putting on the happiest of faces... The production is bright and bouncy and it glows with a fresh-faced come-on-kids-lets-do-a-show flavor... there isn't a single cast member who isn't enormously winning, but Elizabeth Shelle was the standout she should have been as Polly with shining, insinuating eyes and the sweetest of smile... and she is the chief reason BOY FRIEND is such a bubbly delight."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "BOYFRIEND' FANS REJOICE! THE GIDDY FUN RETURNS"

"Some things you just never recover from. Blossom Dearie, learning to ride a bicycle and hearing Noel Coward sing 'Alice Is At It Again' are among them. Another is the THE BOYFRIEND... to my recollection is the only show where a returning viewer will start chuckling during the very overture... Elizabeth Shelle and David Kroll are an attractive pair... and the rest of the cast gives it hell... MaryJo Alexander is a genuine, funny siren. I think they somehow may have been saving her from 1920 just for now."

Construction: Mr. A. J. Miceli, S.J.
Lighting Control: Greg Radtke and Frank Vrabel

Performers: David Kroll, Larry Lichtman, Suzanne La Croix, Don Konrad, Sue Killewald, and Michael Donohue.

Comments: Jay Carr (DN) "SUMMERTREE' IS TENDER AND TOUCHING"

"The U-D couldn't have chosen a better opener for its new Stage II Theater. David Kroll (is) at his best in the scenes where he begins to react to the way he is being boxed in by events...
Michael Donohue was letter perfect... Don Konrad practically anchored the evening with his skillful, moving portrayal of the lost, tense, guilt-ridden father... veteran Suzanne LaCroix did a lot with a flat what's-the-use tone as the mother... and Sue Killewald looked the part of the girl friend... Larry Lichtman, as the kid next door, was a cut above most child actors.

"The actors didn't seem entirely at ease with their ten day old theater yet but SUMMERTREE sits well in the intimate house, and in this troupe's hands, much of the eloquence comes through."

Harvey Taylor (DFP) "SUMMERTREE' - A SENSITIVE PLAY"

Bonita Anderson,

Comments: Larry DeVine (DFP) "James Rodgers directed 'HOW TO...' with enough bright ingenuity so that his cast makes it look as if they did it without really trying. They do try hard, however, and the charm of the musical is ready proof of it..."

Paul Terry (Dearborn Press) "Twenty five energetic folks are demonstrating... how much enthusiasm it takes to do a Broadway musical... Dr. James Rodgers has guided this rocket propelled group. He lit the fuse with his professional direction. Consequently, 'Succeed' is a delightful, fresh production..."

Written by Joseph Heller

Performances 8 Where: Theater 113 (Life Science Blgd)

Director: James W. Rodgers

Settings Designed by Harold Thrasher and Michael Huesman

Lighting Design: Marsha Hardy

Stage Manager: Stephen Guntli

Comments: E.J. Gill (DN) "The production is UofD Theater 113 is hard, tight and sharp as a stiletto. It has a keen, bright, cutting edge. Director Rodgers has kept the action pitched high throughout most of the play but hasn't done any shortchanging on nuance... considering the size of the cast, Rodgers must also be congratulated for selecting and training well. There isn't a weak performance in the lot and there are several strong ones.

"Rodgers and company have given a significant play a first rate production. It's another example of the sort of good theater being found lately in the Livernois-Six Mile area."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "... the play, believe me, is worth seeing. The student actors at UofD directed with uncommon alacrity by James W. Rodgers, give it a stiff go. Susan McDonald and Anthony Hayes are stylish performers..."

Title:  'TIS PITY SHE'S A WHORE

Written by  John Ford

Performances  8  Where:  Theater 113 (Life Science Blgd)

Director:  Dominic Missimi

Setting Designed by H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman

Costume Designer: Nancy Missimi  Lighting: Marsha Hardy

Stage Manager: Mary Boyer

Comments: South End, Craig Reynolds "The outstanding element is Nancy Missimi's costumes. They are rich, authentic, and appropriate. If anything is wrong, it is that the costuming is too bright, too fresh..."

Michigan Catholic "... Theater 113 does so well in re-enacting the drama that it easily stands on it's merit as a play... Dominic Missimi directed the play and did a great job of bringing everything together so well... the challenge inherent in 'Tis a Pity' and the limitations of time and money inherent in any university production make it all the more remarkable that such excellence is achieved."

Title: PRINCE KEVIN'S MAGIC TOUCH
Written by Robert Clymire

Performances 14 Where: Theater 113

Director

Settings: Harold Thrasher and Michael Huesman

Costume Design: Nancy Missimi Lighting: Stage Manager:

A.D.

Performers: None Listed in Brochure

Notes: This production was part of the on-going U-D Children's Theater Program that dated back to the 1966 production of CINDERELLA. Other productions in this program included: ALICE IN WONDERLAND, TOBY THE TALKING TURTLE, ANDROCLES AND THE LION, THE THREE LITTLE PIGS, AND FURKLE THE FRIENDLY LION.

According to the brochure, this particular production (PRINCE KEVIN'S ... ) was made available to tour the Detroit area on Tuesdays and Thursdays during the Spring season of 1971. The brochure lists the curtain time as being 10:00 a.m. with a cost of $175.00 per performance. It also lists the production requirements as to size of the hall, lighting, and support facilities needed to mount the production in the clients space.

There is no note made of the number of outside hire dates for the program.

Title: THE EMPIRE BUILDERS

Performances 8 Where: Theater 113

Director Dominic Missimi

Costume Design: Nancy Missimi Lighting: Marsha Hardy

A.D. Mary Aufman Stage Manager: Kathleen Vance

Comments: Jay Carr (DN) "Not since Eugene Ionesco's THE KING DIES has the suffocating finality of death been so powerfully conjured up on a stage as it was last night in Boris Vian's sardonically titled THE EMPIRE BUILDERS at the UofD. The impact of the UofD production can be traced to director Dominic Missimi's realization that the play isn't only about a family fleeing death. It is also about the layers of death that already enshroud the family. Vian has physicalized death with an inspired despair and an unering theatrical instinct and this production makes Vian's gripping images not only tangible, but memorable... With this haunting and arresting EMPIRE BUILDERS and it's superbly integrated WE BOMBED IN NEW HAVEN earlier this season, the U of D Theater unmistakably establishes itself as our town's pace-setting campus troupe."

Harvey Taylor (DFP) "... Thackaberry and James Stahl as the Schmurz are obviously the stars of the evening but Jean Dotterweich gave a good account of herself... as did Katherine Cantillon and Charles Noel... Dominic Missimi's direction in a difficult assignment was excellent as were the settings, costumes, and lights. After the play, we couldn't resist going backstage to see how the Schmurz had survived the arduous role. It turned out young Stahl had a costume made of foam rubber, heavy leather, and other strategic paddings.

'Kick me,' he said. So we did - only to find he had hockey goaltenders shin guards. But it was a pleasure anyway. Not everybody gets to kick Death in the shins."

Title: SLOW DANCING ON THE KILLING GROUND
Written by          William Hanley

Performances  8  Where: Theater 113  (Life Science Building)
Director          Robert Clymire
Settings          Designed by H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman
Costumes:         Mary Jo Alexander and Cathy Blaser
Lighting by       Marsha Hardy
A.D.: Michael Klier  Stage Manager: Greg Menke

Performers: Lee O'Connell, Clifford Roquemore, Gloria Wesley, James Stahl, and Dee Gutkowski.

Comments: John Lombardi (MichCath) "`SLOW DANCE' OFTEN OUT OF STEP"
"Thanks to the rather experienced stage performance of Lee O'Connell, and the only consistent dialect of Roquemore, along with the true meaning of the scenario, there is indeed a message to the two and half hour staging: There are problems in the world categorically personified by the characters; the solution MUST begin with the individual."

Wayne Eagle "`SLOW DANCE ENSEMBLE JUST Doesn'T MAKE IT"
"Only Lee O'Connell's performance is fully mature, reserved, formal and slightly suspicious on the outside, masking an anguished quilt ridden soul. Robert Clymire's staging is too athletic in the quiet moments... the set, a grimy Brooklyn candy store and apartment is wholly authentic."

Title: TALES FROM 100 AKER WOOD

Written by A. A. Milne     Adapted by Dr. James W. Rodgers

Performances 12 Where: Theater 113 (Life Science Building)
Cost: $1.25

Director: Dr. James W. Rodgers

Choreographer: Dominic Missimi

Costumes Design: Nancy Missimi & Sue Mahoney

Stage Manager:

Performers: Dominic Kline, Jane Linahan, Marc McCulloch, Jeannine Andree, Jim Stahl, Michele Becker, Steve Guntu, and Michael Walczak

Comments: Don Konrad ( ) "This unpretentious, engaging production - with a minimum of scenery but a wealth of imaginative costuming, charming characterizations by a cast of eight, and interspersed with 11 catchy tunes - was given substance by Dr. James W. Rodgers, chairman of the university's department of performing arts. Rodgers adapted the Milne stories, composed the music, directed, and set before the audience a flavorful 'Cottleston Pie.'

"Adults who shy away from 'children's plays' should put this bias aside. The play can be more for them an excursion into innocence that is at once literate, humorous, and refreshing; a holiday from 'mature' fare glutted with oppressiveness and cynicism.

"Dominic Kline plays Pooh with a lovability and whimsy that convinced the youngsters and enthused adults as well with a gentle, consistent characterization... Jane Linahan playing (Christopher Robin) resisted the temptation to portray him as a 'gosh, oh golly' sissy and made us believe she was a boy.

"The single dominant performance was Marc McCulloch as Eeyore. McCulloch has a consummate sense of movement and, although his face was never seen his postures reflected every thought. Another delight was Jeannine Andree as Kanga. Jim Stahl was fine as Rabbit. Michele Becker, with a wonderful wire-thin, weepy voice, was Piglet. Steve Guntu (who certainly can handle kids) was the MC; and Michael Walczak doubled as a tree and Owl with equal alacrity.

"Costumes were by Nancy Missimi and Sue Mahoney were object lessons in cleverness. Dominic Missimi's choreography was wry and infectious."

Title: UNDER MILKWOOD
Written by Dylan Thomas

Performances 5  Where: Theater 113

Director: David Regal (Guest Artist in Residence)
Lighting: David Hartmann  Costumes: Suzanne Mahoney
A.D.: Kathy Bieke  Properties: Rosemary Gant
House Manager: Mary Boyer

Comments: FINAL REGULAR SEASON SHOW AT THE THEATER 113

Howard Allen (Pontiac Press) "... Theater 113 in the biology building is presenting its last hurrah, Dylan Thomas' poetic dramatization, UNDER MILKWOOD... essentially a dramatic reading rather than a play, but David Regal has artfully staged it. If the production encounters difficulties in achieving a unity of style, this is more than matched by Regal's superb gross blocking.

"Almost no effort was made to capture the lilting Welsh accent, save only by June Snow... other effective characterizations were the romantic draper of John Guinn, the nosey postman of Tom Nugent, and narration of Lee O'Connell.

"The world of Willy Nilly, Goassamer Beynon, Nogood Boyo, and Organ Morgan is a magic world, earthy yet remote. U-D/Marygrove's examination of it achieves moments of stature."

GRAND OPENING SEASON - Spring, 1972
Show dates: Feb through Feb 20, 1972

Title: THE TEMPEST

Performances 8 Where: Performing Arts Center (PAC)-Marygrove
Director: James W. Rodgers
Settings: H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman
Costumes: Suzanne P. Mahoney Lighting: H.E. Thrasher Stage Manager: Jane Linahan Light Control: David Hartmann and Elizabeth Garret Perfomers: Shepperd Strudwick, David Regal, Jane Hamara, W. Paul Unger, Mark McCulloch, Richard Kordos, Charles Noel,
           Henry C. Schneidewind, Charles Noel, James Stahl, Thomas Nugent, James S. Newell, Gary Eberle, Chris Shulte, Darrell Howard, Gregory Menke, Courtney Morgan, Joseph Rutherford, Raye Wojcik, Michael Sparough S.J., Raymond Masters, Marianne Ilg, Taricia Johnson, Kathleen Hopkins, Jeannine Andree, Cathy Blaser, Mary Boyer, Roberta Campion, Debbie Mims, and Gary Eberle.

NOTE: THE FIRST SHOW IN THE NEW PERFORMING ARTS CENTER:
      THE THEATER - MARYGROVE COLLEGE.

Notes: Nick Lombardo (VN) "The power in the play is centered in David Regal's Caliban. Regal turns Shakespeare's misborn monster into the second best part in the play. Caliban's physical presence, made larger by the bulky costume, dominates the stage.
Caliban is all id, angry and covetous, yet comic in embracing of Stephano, master of the wine bottle. Caliban is the animal in man.
THE TEMPEST at The Theater comes with the highest recommendations.
It is a fit opening production for a playhouse that is one of only three of its kind on the continent. In fact, this production makes one wonder why this season's schedule includes only one work of Shakespeare."
GRAND OPENING SEASON - Spring, 1972
Show dates (From) March 9 through March 26, 1972

Title: CHILD'S PLAY

Written by Robert Marasco

"A psychological thriller, CHILD'S PLAY is a dramatic insight into the lives of the faculty and students of a Jesuit boys boarding school."

Performances 8 Where: The Performing Arts Center (PAC) Marygrove

Director: James W. Rodgers

Settings: H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman

Costumes: Cathy Blaser Lighting: David Hartmann, Rosemary Gant, and Kathleen Vance.

A.D.: Nancy Steimal Stage Manager: Marc McCulloch

Notes: Ernest Gilbert (DN) "Make no mistake (this play) is not for children... hard hitting and powerful, yet subtle... Rogers has created a strained and foreboding atmosphere that underscores the drama's icy bleakness. Rodgers has the added benefit of some outstanding performances, particularly the ones delivered by Shepperd Strudwick and David Regal. Strudwick is superb, building the role from a quietly restrained beginning to its harrowing climax with consistently tight control. Regal played the part of the tortured Malley with blazing intensity. James Newell delivered a solid performance as Paul Reese. Robert Hachlinski handled the part of the scotch-slinging obscenity-sprouting Father Penny with a good feel for its comic properties... Richard Kordos and Charles Noel were also admirable... (This play) is one of the best things around, and I'd strongly urge you to see it."

Patricia Foote (VN) "CHILD'S PLAY offers theater-goers explosive acting along with suspense: it plays heavy on the emotions."

Craig Reynolds (South End) "Regal's performance is one that will come up time and again when talk is about favorite evenings of theater."
GRAND OPENING SEASON - SPRING, 1972
Show Dates (From) April 13 through April 23, 1972

Title: LYSISTRATA
Written by Aristophanes Adapted by David Regal

"Adapted and directed by David Regal, LYSISTRATA carries the classic themes of anti-war and women's liberation, perhaps the most widely discussed subjects today, especially in this an election year."

Performances 8 Where: The Theater - PAC (Marygrove)
Director: David Regal Musical Director: David Patrick Kelly
Set Design: H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman
Costumes: Suzanne P. Mahoney
Lighting Design: David Hartmann, Rosemary Gant, and Kathleen Vance
A.D.: Kathleen Marshall Stage Manager: Nancy Steimel
Performers: Elizabeth Garrett, John Dwyer, James Stahl, Michael O'Brien, Chris Becker, Mary Gutzi, Mary Boyer, Debra Mims, Lorraine Bove, Cathy Blaser, Marianne Ilg, Deborah Andrews, Jonie Howie, Mary Therese Van Hollenbeck, Paul Andrecovich, Virginia Winters, Bonnie Whalen, Yvonne Doolittle, Jeannine Andree, Michael Libowitz, Mary Newell, Henry Schneidewind, Russ Dobson, W. Paul Unger, Robert Quigley, Raymond Masters, and Jane Hamara.

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "David Regal's adaptation preserves the rank jest of the ancient double entendres and my regret, while watching the show, was that Bert Lahr wasn't alive to suffer farcially through the role of the oafish soldier who has been too long away from his wife. I don't know whether Regal or costumer Suzanne Mahoney is to be congratulated on the costumes. But they are an immense asset... Mary Gutzi's libidinous Keloike was able to tap her feet and roll her hips to effect in a number called 'Kill-O-Cycle.' Marianne Ilg looked right as the motorcycle queen, it was good to see Yvonne Doolittle again as the throaty woman's chorus leader, and Chris Becker was a cute and resolute Lysistrata... this LYSISTRATA is an endearingly gamy farrago all the same. It keeps its comedy low and its morals high."
SUMMER REP - 1972

Show Dates: June 30 to July 15, 1972

Title: YOU'RE A GOOD MAN CHARLIE BROWN

Book, Music, and Lyrics: Clark Gesner

Performances: 9  Where: Theater 113
(Rm 113 in Life Sciences Bldg)

Director: H.E. Thrasher

Settings: Kathy Vance  Costumes: Cathy Blaser
Lighting Design: Marsha Hardy  Musical Direction: Dennis Penny

Stage Manager: Michael Walczak
Lighting: Marilyn Opdyke and Virginia Trombley
Properties: Rosemary Gant and Patrick Roney

Set Construction: Paul Endrecovich, Marilyn Brown, Jane Linahan, Nancy Steimel

Piano: Dennis Penny  Percussion: Lee Antaya

Performers: Bill McCarthy, Jane Kent, James Stahl, Dennis Bailey, Steve Edwards, and Mary Gutzl.

Notes:

Craig Reynolds (South End) "The show is a confectionery delight, with enough salt to make it palatable. CHARLIE BROWN is fun to see, for no better reason than we all went through it really, one time, some time ago, and it's nice to look back casually and sympathetically. Special mention goes to Walt Kempski, a guy who does things that the others don't, like design programs and lobby displays and posters and sorts of odds and ends."
SUMMER REP - 1972

Show Dates: July 9 to July 23, 1972

TITLE: ALL THAT FALL

Written by Samuel Beckett

"The plot revolves around Mrs. Rooney's trip to the railroad station to meet her husband; her experiences along the way and the Rooney's return home provide Beckett with his existential material."

Performances 6 Where: Stage II (Livernois and Grove)

Director: David Regal

Assistant Director: Jane Hamara Lighting: Marsha Hardy

Costumes: Cathy Blaser Properties: Jane Hamara

Sound: Jim Forrestor

Notes: Howard Allen (?) "Beckett's plays can be extraordinary to direct; they are often set on a bare stage. It is much easier to direct when you have a set to relate and play within. That David Regal generally succeeds is due to his ability to avoid static patterns in positioning his actors.

"Further he accents the absurdist design of his characters by playing them as representations. Mr. Slocum travels by auto - an auto which is two shopping carts lashed together; Mr. Tyler's bicycle is a set of roller skates and bicycle handlebars."

Jay Carr (DN) "Extracting the bleak humor and the poetics of futility from any Beckett play poses a challenge of alpine magnitude to () directors. ALL THAT FALL adds another difficulty in that was written for radio.

"Beckett: a world made of words, pierced by stabs of gratuitous suffering, inhabited by tottering ancients listening to their own decrescendo of decay as they slowly plummet toward the ultimate absurdity: death. The play is minor Beckett - but since minor Beckett towers over major anyone else... Regal is at his most resourceful when it comes to handling the physical motion that is spoken about in the play..."
SUMMER REP - 1972

Title: A VIEW FROM THE BRIDGE

Written by Arthur Miller

"A powerful and vivid study by one of America's most distinguished playwrights. Set in a predominantly Italian neighborhood in the shadow of the Brooklyn Bridge in 1955, the play centers around Eddie Carbone, a second generation American longshoreman. Inordinately fond of this niece, Eddie looks disdainfully on the arrival of his two young cousins from Europe. In time, disdain turns to hatred and hatred begets violence in this powerful modern American classic."

Performances 6 Where: The Theater - PAC - (Marygrove)

Director James W. Rodgers

Settings: H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman

Lighting Design: Nicholas Koch Costumes: Cathy Blaser

Stage Manager: Nancy Steimel

Notes: Ernest Gilbert (DN) "There's quite a bit going for (this production)... Director James W. Rodgers has assembled a generally strong cast, and with them shaped a taut, sensitive presentation. It's one that has not completely jelled, but its blemishes are relatively minor... the dialogue has plenty of vitality and it's tailor made for David Regal's energetic approach... Regal is one of the more impressive local talents... his Eddie Carbone is volatile and brutal, but also has the tenderness and pathos suggested by a man who, like the other characters in the play, reaches for but cannot quite grasp the truth about himself... solid support from Ann Williams as his long suffering wife Beatrice, and Myron Papich and Robert E. Quigley as the illegal immigrants... Papich was particularly moving in the early scenes..."
2nd Season -72/73- Show Dates from Oct 13 to Oct 29, 1972

Title: ONE FLEW OVER THE CUCKOO'S NEST

Written by Dale Wasserman

"This frightfully honest drama centers on Randle McMurphy's brief coup d'état of a mental hospital: absurdity becomes increasing evident as the action progresses from sport to all-out warfare."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater PAC (Marygrove)

Director: James W. Rodgers

Set Design: H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman

Costume Design: Nancy Missimi Lighting Design: David Hartmann

A.D.: Deborah Florence Stage Manager: Mary Anne Mueller

Notes: Played to 98% capacity.

Jay Carr (DN) "The big triumph of the U-D's ONE FLEW OVER THE CUCKOO'S NEST lies not so much in it's persuading us that the inmates do briefly run the asylum, but that they deserve to run it... James Rogers, who has done some adapting, has staged the play with energy and intelligence, and has orchestrated and choreographed the inmates admirably. David Regal, an actor of power, whoops and yawps his way... splendidly. Chris Schulte was an enormous asset as the Indian, and Joyce Feurring kept the implausibly two-dimensional malevolence Univac of a nurse simmering and seething with Gothic vivacity."
2nd Season -72/73- Show dates from Nov 17 to Dec 3, 1972
Title: THE COMEDY OF ERRORS
Written by William Shakespeare
"A seldom-performed early comedy of Shakespeare, this zany farce details the repercussions that come about from a case of mistaken identity - a 'Roman romp' in the tradition of Plautus."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)
Director: Dominic Missimi
Design: Nancy Missimi Mime Sequences: David Patrick Kelly
Music: John Guinn Lighting Design: David Hartmann
A.D.: Jane Mary Kent Stage Manager: Nancy Steimel

Performers: Craig Reynolds, Charles Noel, Steve Davies, David Partick Kelly, John Dwyer, Marc McCulloch, Susan Ives, Lisa Goodman, Michael O'Mara, Martin L. Bufalini S.J., Elizabeth Garrett, James Stahl, Mary Gutzi, Kathleen Marshall, Christopher Schulte S.J., Michael Sparough S.J., Dennis Sullivan, William McCarthy, Jame Hamara, Gwen Humble, Michael Sparough, Terry Wolverton, Dennis Bailey, Cowntney Morgan, Dennis Sullivan, Mary Anne Mueller, and Donald Sicko.

Notes: Nick Lombardo (VN) "In its production of Shakespeare's COMEDY OF ERRORS, the Theater has put everything together in a beautiful production. The play is one of Shakespeare's earlier, stiffer comedies, but the cast and production staff have taken advantage of even the play's weakest scenes with a stunning series of staging effects. Among the most striking segments of the play were the mime sequences, arranged by BFA senior David Patrick Kelly... at the onset, one have missed David Regal, absent form this production, but Kelly's performance generated such energy with such poise that, like Regal, he commands all one's attention whenever he is on stage... It stands out over any play of its kind in recent memory, including a few Shakespearian comedies at the Hillbery. It is a must!"
2nd Season - 72/73 - Shows from January 26 to Feb 11, 1973

Title:      OF MICE AND MEN

Written by  John Steinbeck

"A Pulitzer Prize-winner, this strong-armed character study follows a pair of itinerant farmhands - Lennie and George - in pursuit of their dream; they provide each other with the 'shelter' necessary to continue their quest."

Performances  9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Director: James W. Rodgers

Settings: Kathleen Vance, Michael Huesman and H.E. Thrasher

Lighting Design: Rosemary Gant     Music: David Patrick Kelly

Stage Manager: Michael Seltzer

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "James Rodgers' intelligent direction captured Steinbeck's tenderness and the period feeling with an immense assist from Rosemary Gant's lighting and the tumbledown bunkhouse setting - best at The Theater since it opened. David Regal, who is making something of a career of playing Lummox roles... Kelly Burke - deserves credit for making us believe in George's concern for Lennie and in the spiritual love between the two companions."

Nick Lombardo (VN) "Kelly Burke's portrayal of George is the best in the play. He stands out in relief against the rest just a little sharper, just a little more awake when he delivers his lines. Owen Anderson's 'Slim' was just as good in his own way, quiet, but feeling, strong but sensitive. The whole play is well-acted but these two stand out. OF MICE AND MEN is an unusual play for The Theater, but it is as good in its own way as any they've done."
2nd Season -72/73- Shows From March 2 to March 18, 1973

Title ABELARD & HELOISE

Written by Ronald Millar

"This imaginative historical drama traces the tragic affair between the twelfth-century scholar/priest Peter Abelard and the beautiful young pupil who falls in love with him."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Director: David Regal

Set Design: Michael Huesman and H.E. Thrasher

Costume Design: Nancy Missimi Lighting Design: Rosemary Gant

A.D.: Elizabeth J. Garrett Stage Manager: Deborah Hazlett

Light Control: Mary Anne Mueller Sound Control: Mary Lou Novak and Michael Seltzer

Notes: Nick Lombardo (VN) "... under David Regal's direction, the UD/Marygrove company presents a spellbinding version that leaves few imperfections... first rate production... at play's end, the opening night audience was left breathless, and a moment of stunned silence preceded their applause."

Jay Carr (DN) "Earl D.A. Smith, who seems to have studied at the feet of Charles Laughton, has fun with his wine goblet and his epigrams... June Snow was a joy as the Irish nun... Greg Olszewski got the job done as Fulbert... Kate Marshall was an asset as a loving abbess with a fondness for wine... Marc McCulloch had a touching moment... and Gary Eberle was briefly affecting as Abelard's country brother-in-law."

Tom Ewald (Michigan Catholic) "The castration scene is powerful and frightening, only because such unrestrained violence or passion had yet to be witnessed on stage..."
2nd Season -72/73-  Show Dates from April 5 to April 15, 1973
Title: THE HORSE
Written by Julius Hay

"A contemporary Hungarian playwright has written a bittersweet comedy based on an incident in the life of Roman Emperor Caligula - the satire is lighthearted, but makes a vital statement about life in a totalitarian regime."

Performances 9  Where: The Theater (Marygrove)
Director: Dominic Missimi
Set Design: Rosemary Gant, H.E. Thrasher, and Michael Huesman
Costume Design: Nancy Missimi  Lighting Design: Deborah Hazlett
A.D.: Beata Jachulski  Stage Manager: Bonnie Whalen
Performers: Earl D.A. Smith, Perry Mallette, Christopher Schulte, Mary Gutzi, David Patrick Kelly, Dennis Broadhead, Jean Dotterhead, Jane Hamara, James R. Stahl, Tom Williams, Raymond Masters, Dennis Bailey, Dennis Sullivan, Michael O'Mara, Phyllis Meli,
Gwen Humble, Debra Mims, Elizabeth J. Garrett, Randi Sanfield, John Dwyer, Jim Donavan, Pat Butler, Roger Pena, Michael Lebowitz, Sheila Dunbar, and Tina Gajewski.

Notes: American Premiere
Harold Habinski (The South End)(SE) "...is probably the best Marygrove Theater production and one of the best area productions of this season. It does everything it sets out to do - foremost to get you to laugh... Solid acting, highlighted by Earl Smith's Caligula and tight direction by Dominic Missimi move the play at a frantically funny pace. Not one horse turd of amateurism slips up in this production."

Nick Lombardo (VN) "STUDENT ACTING. FINE DIRECTING BRING WEAK 'HORSE' SCRIPT ALIVE"  * "The rest of the cast, anchored by Mr. Smith's performance, works with madcap freedom, running almost amuck about the stage, improvising slapstick sight gags, and obviously enjoying every minute of it... this play is the perfect finish to an excellent season..."
2nd Season - 72/73- Show Dates from May 18 to June 2, 1973

Title: LUV

Written by Murray Schisgal

"A contemporary comedy in that its humor is of the laughter-through-tears sort. The love/hate vacillations of the play's three characters become hilarious in their hopelessness."

Performances 6 Where: The Theater (Marygove)

Director: James W. Rodgers

Settings by Michael Huesman

Lighting by Michael Huesman and Rosemary Grant

Stage Manager: Nancy Steimel Lighting Control: Jane Linahan

Sound Control: Rosemary Berkley

Performers: David Regal, Myron Papich, and Mary Gutzl

Notes: Larry DeVine (DPP) "... LUV is a three letter word for i-u-n... a very fast, funny, locomotive stage by James W. Rodgers. Milt is especially well handled by Myron Papich, a large fluffy mustache with a little being... best in the show, though, is Mary Gutzl, a surprisingly adept young comedienne who makes Ellen Manville brisk but tender."

Tom Ewald (Michigan Catholic) "... performing in probably the most demanding role of his career, the Theater's Guest Artist-in Residence, David Regal, as Milt's woefully disillusioned friend Harry, handles it beautifully. Going from fits of depression compounded by contrived epileptic seizures to exaggerated heights of ecstatic delight. Dave's gestures and stage acrobatics left him exhausted at the end."
3rd Season -73/74- Show Dates from Sept 28 to Oct 14, 1973

Title: RASHOMON

Written by Faye and Michael Kanin

"RASHOMON consists of four versions of the same terrible crime, each version individually distinctly believable, but each an outright lie to the other. Yet by the telling of the fourth tale, we see they can all be true, but only to the extent of the mirror's reflection."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Director: David Regal

Settings by: H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman

Costume Design: Nancy Missimi Lighting Design: H.E. Thrasher

Stage Manager: Michael Libowitz

Notes: Tom Ewald (Mich Catholic) "The settings by H.E. Thrasher and the creative direction of David regal make RASHOMON an unusual and enjoyable adventure into the past. Mr. Smith, as Tajormaru, unleashes one of the strongest performances ever to captivate the Theater's stage. So what's in a lie? About two hours of intense drama guaranteed to engross even the most casual stage-goer. And that's no lie."

Alan Kroker, Radio Station WIID. "If Cecil B. DeMille had staged RASHOMON it could not have been more flamboyant than the production staged by David Regal, who is rapidly becoming U-D's wunderkind..."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "The best way to get noticed is to pick a fight. That may not be precisely an old tried-and-true show business maxim, but it will serve for The Theater's belligerent season-opening production... Regal, who is a man of some bombast as an actor, is quieter and mature for his years as a director...."
3rd Season - 73/74 - Show Dates from Nov 2 to Nov 18, 1973

Title: OTHELLO

Written by William Shakespeare

"One of Shakespeare's most well-known tragedies - with Earl D.A. Smith as Othello and David Regal as Iago."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Director: James W. Rodgers

Stage Facade: H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman

Costume Design: Nancy Missimi Lighting: Deborah Hazlett

Stage Manager: Beata Jchulski

Notes: unknown (VN) "The play features solid performances by such notable actors as Earl D.A. Smith and David Regal. Smith... from his first entrance on stage and throughout... captivates the audience with his deep voice, his striking outfits and his stately and majestic African appearance. Regal, a well known Detroit area actor and director, delights the audience with his brilliant portrayal of the scheming Iago, a character who loves only himself. Tina Gajewski gave a beautiful and touching performance as Othello's wife... Other notable performances were given by Marc L. McCulloch as Cassio, Patricia Kihn as Iago's wife, and Henry Mustelier as Roderigo... Marilyn Kacir gave a sexy and entertaining performance as Bianca... Chris Schulte was equally impressive as Brabanito."

Jim Stanley (South End) "Reading the script, one simply accepts the fact that Othello's innate goodness can be so easily corrupted. It simply happens. But, when Earl D.A. Smith brings the part to life, the reason becomes obvious... Once again I am amazed at the perfection of the acting company of THE THEATER. Sometimes when writing I wish they had done something wrong to make my job easier. Good acting is difficult to criticize."
3rd Season -73/74- Show Dates from Dec 7 to Dec 16, 1973

Title: THE WIZARD OF OZ

Written by L. Frank Baum  Adapted by Frank Gabrielson

Musical Score by Harold Arlen and E.Y. Harburg

"A holiday entertainment for the entire family..."

Title: DYLAN

Written by Sidney Michaels

"A dramatization of the later years of Welsh poet Dylan Thomas."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Director: James W. Rodgers

Settings by H.E. Thrasher and Michael Huesman

Costume Design: Michael Seltzer Lighting: H.E. Thrasher

Stage Manager: Henry Mustelier

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "David Regal in the title role has studied the poet's recordings conscientiously and does a lot with his eyes to suggest Dylan's fear and charm and wayward romanticism. Patricia Kihn brought fire to the role of his plucky, baffled, hurt wife Catlin. Mary Gutz was affectionately self-possessed as the woman who takes Dylan in hand too late. James Rodger's directorial baton kept the young cast moving crisply."

Larry Devine: (DFP) "... interesting to watch Regal near the top of his form, playing a boozy, randy screwball... Some lyrical moments: Dylan building a fatal pyramid of shot glasses in his favorite White Horse Saloon; or, in a moment nicely done by Regal, mooning over a child's rhyme in the nursery of a friend... the acting is solidly constructed. Pat Kihn, proving to be one of the revelations of this year's company at The Theater..."

Catherine Haven (MC) "... David Regal captures the irresponsible yet human soul of Dylan. Director Rodgers has turned Michaels' irregular script into impressive, bawdy and bold adult entertainment. Dylan is not allowed to go gently into that good night, but rages against what he sees as the dying of his poetic and physical life."
3rd Season -73/74- Show Dates from March 15 to March 31, 1974

Title: TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES

Written by Bill Morrison

"The American Premiere of this new adaption of the Victorian novel by Thomas Hardy."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Director: Dominic Missimi

Settings by H.E. Thrasher, Michael Huesman, and Michael Seltzer

Costume Design: Nancy Missimi

Lighting Design: Mary Anne Mueller

Stage Manager: John Dwyer

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Missimi's production, called an American premiere, is a Hardy adaptation by a writer named Bill Morrison that Missimi met two years ago on a furlough in Northern England. Credit Missimi then for being daring enough to dream the imported and transmogrified Hardy strov might work in America... the leading performance is by an actress of 19 or 20 named Gwen Humble who, if she is not the most trained and experienced actress around is unarguably one of the most sincere and lovely... with a cast this large, The Theater's acting resources are almost threadbare and the patches show in the smaller roles. But one cannot foegd credit for the charming little performances by Michael Lebowitz, Beata Jachulski, and Tina Gałewski as the village girls."

Jay Carr (DN) "... The Theater tries honorably to move Thomas Hardy's novel from the page to the stage and falls short. Perhaps inevitably so. Novel and stage are like oil and water. They work so differently that the adaptor is faced with an almost insuperable difficulty... atmosphere rather character is the Marygrove achievement... although one farmer's speech, skillfully spoken by David Redal in a voice left over from DYLAN pungently conures up the smell and hotness of summer ripeness on a dairy farm."
3rd Season -73/74- Show Dates from April 19 to May 5, 1974

Title: LITTLE ME

written by Neil Simon

Lyrics by Carolyn Leigh Music by Cy Coleman

"Based on the novel by Patrick Dennis. Musical hilarity - the delightful story of the life and loves of a famous Hollywood actress."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Director: James W. Rodgers

Settings by: H.E. Thrasher, Michael Huesman, and Deborah Hazlett

Costume Design: Nancy Missimi Lighting Design: Nancy Stimel

Stage Manager: Cecilia Bolan

Notes: Craig Reynolds (Eccentric) "LITTLE ME is a catch-all of unforgettable nonsense doubtless culled from the dead files of author Neil Simon's days as a TV gag writer. The only thing holding it together is the lack of air between nonstop jokes. Prime movers in this carnival are Gwen Humble... and Chris Schulte... Mary Gutzi as a grown-up and all-woman Belle... and Dennis Bailey... and 11 or 300 others... fine fun."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "The Theater's surprise production of the willy-nilly musical LITTLE ME reminds you there are some musicals that are nothing but fun for fun's sake... it splatters all over the stage - there are 95 roles in it, ranging from Egyptian kings to German soldiers to a heroine with the record Broadway name of that era, Belle Poltrine... seems right at home on The Theater's stage because it was directed by James W. Rodgers, who once did LITTLE MARY SUNSHINE with its idiot chorus of singing Canadian Mounties. Rodgers knows craziness when he stages it... (Schulte is the star.)"
4th Season -74/75- Show Dates from Oct 4 to Oct 20, 1974

Title: A MIDSUMMER'S NIGHT'S DREAM

Written by William Shakespeare

"Three pairs of lovers, five buffoons, and a small army of woodland creatures mix magic and mayhem into the perfect romantic comedy."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (MarvGrove)

Director: Dominic Missimi Tech Director: Timothy Beatty

Set Design: Timothy R. Dewart Costume Design: Nancy Missimi

Lighting Design: Timothy R. Dewart and John Martin Krol

A.D.: Kathleen Loague Stage Manager: Gail Nikolics

Notes: Radio Review, Station WILD by Alan Kroker "If you want to see Shakespeare, try Stratford. If you want to see Missimi at his most irrepressible, he awaits you at The Theater."

Susan J. Slobojian (DN) "The Theater has opened its fourth season with a fast paced and thoroughly enjoyable version of Shakespeare's classic comic celebration of love and magic... Regal and his fellow workman act out a play for the court in which he milks out a death scene for nearly five minutes and, when he finally succumbs, brings down the house..."

Craig Reynolds (Observer) "Once again the unnamed star was Nancy Missimi's richly crafted and textured costuming, and the moody lighting by Timothy R. Dewart and John Martin Krol was perhaps the best ever put on The Theater's stage."
4th Season -74/75-  Show Dates from Nov 8 to Nov 24, 1974
Title: BLOOD WEDDING
Written by Frederico Garcia Lorca
"A mother's hatred sets in motion this ritual tragedy of passion and murder."
Performances y Where: The Theater (Marvgrove)
Director: David Regal  Tech Director: Timothy Beatty
Set and Lighting Design: Timothy K. Dewart
Costume Design: Nancy Missimi and Verna Finley
A.D.: NL  Stage Manager: NL
Performers: Colleen Griffin, June Snow, Joe Kolinski, Susan Ives Cook, Alanna Hamill, Michael O'Mara, Jeanne Fox, Mary Congeyer, Louise Martin, Roger Middleton, Tina Gajewski.
Leo Nouhan, Patricia Kihn, and John B. O'Reilly Jr.

Notes: Vivian Ceccarelli (VN) "Overall. The Theater's production of BLOOD WEDDING is good. With Regal's interpretation carrying the main weight and providing sufficient tension and conflict..."

Jay Carr (DN) "Then there is Frederico Garcia Lorca's BLOOD WEDDING at The Theater. There is no point in going too deeply into this one since it failed on both levels on which this play must be approached simultaneously, the mythopoetic and naturalistic. The young actors simply couldn't muster the somber gravity necessary to convince us they were fiercely dignified Spaniards wrenching a living from a parched land preoccupied with death."

Jim Stanley (South End) "BLOOD WEDDING bombed out at Marvgrove last Friday."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "Even the best directors are only human. They can be fooled... So here is the theater's eternal conundrum: Is it better to have tried and failed than never to have tried at all?"

Notes: Catherine Haven (MC) "Via the magic hands of director Dominic Missimi, the exuberance, color, and excitement of last year's production returns, as most importantly, its four excellent leads. "Mary Callaghan exerts her own brand of originality and strong voice... If scarecrows could really walk and talk, no doubt they'd walk and talk like Owen J. Anderson... John Dwyer, as the Cowardly Lion, becomes a crowd favorite... Henry Mustelier displays the proper trim and straight technique as the Tin Woodman..."

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "The extraordinary revival of GODSPELL at The Theater, directed by Dominic Missimi, is the show that begs the question: What could Missimi do with five loaves and two fishes... a vestpocket-full of stage miracles... Missimi's unflagging invention is spread over the vaudeville combinations..." Catherine Haven (MC) "At the Theater, nothing is ever done like it's been done before... some marriages of song and drama are made in heaven... no doubt GODSPELL was also made for The Theater."

Leo Droishagen (VN) "In this Dominic Missimi directed version the audience e-x-p-e-r-i-ence the enthusiasm, vitality of a company that races down the isles wearing orange shirts. Greco painted faces and having the homogeneity of a U.S. Olympic team... the actors race in and out of the audience, sometimes stopping to kiss parents and friends... 'GOD is Dead?' Well not quite yet."

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "... director David Regal keeps the traffic moving smoothly and most of the actors eventually connect with their juicy roles..."

Leo Droishagen (VN) "... delightful revival of ARSENIC AND OLD LACE. The murder comedy which stuffs more bodies in the basement than a full time morgue can only be described as excellent."

Tom Ewald (HC) "The knockout of the evening? Good ol' Myron Papich in a real solid performance as the not so solid 'Teddy Roosevelt' Brewster. His antics and constant interjection 'Bully!' are show stoppers."

Jim Stanley (SE) "As is usual at The Theater, loving attention is paid to the scenery. The living room... is wallbapered, woodworked, and decorated with an eye to taste and period, a cozy set. Finally a review of this play would not be complete without reverence to the music. Incredible high camp. If Tchaikowskii were alive today, David Regal would not be. Regal, by the way, did a good job directing this one. He is now giving more attention to specifics rather than creating atmospheres."

Notes:  Jay Carr (DN) "... the evening makes it on sheer exuberance... Director Regal sends all scampering benignly among the steel scaffolding that makes up the stage... like greenery poking through the urban rubble... THE ME NOBODY KNOWS celebrates renewal in the midst of ugliness..."

Christine......... (?) "THE ME NOBODY KNOWS is a forceful exuberant musical that keeps it's audience on an emotional roller coaster... in the end, positive aspects of the play carry the day... The Theater's production fulfill the highest expectations of the audience and give it a living emotional experience for two hours..."

Title: MACBETH

Written by William Shakespeare

"Director Dominic Missimi has decided to attempt a 'total theater' project with this production of MACBETH. Total theater can occur when the elements of 'theater magic' or 'illusion' become predominant. An environment or atmosphere is created which is not a neatly packaged reality - images, sounds, colors, and textures are used to create a complete experience... the settings are the costumes, and vice-versa - dresses and capes become tents, sleeves become tree limbs and whole forests... MACBETH'S ever present witches will perch on poles to control, like magicians, the action of the play."

Performances 9 (Final day matinee only)
Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Director: Dominic Missimi Tech Director: Timothy Beatty
Set and Lighting Design: Paul A. Norrenbrock
Costume Design: Nancy Missimi Stage Combat: Fred Keating
Stage Manager: Lissa Kamalay

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "One nice thing about The Theater is that the people who inhabit it are ambitious. An even nicer thing is that they often realize their ambitions... David Regal is at his best as Macbeth the man of action, moving and vocalizing forcefully... Joyce Ramsey was a fine figure of a Lady Macbeth... the cast looked good... If not the most penetrating MACBETH, this is a commendable effort."

Chris Brown (DFP) "...this production of MACBETH establishes an ever-tightening emotional grip on the audience through the sweepingly tragic performances of its two leads and through the stark spectacle of its presentation... David Regal brings the quality of his true name to Macbeth - he is every inch a monarch, a man driven to madness..."

Performers: Owen J. Anderson, Joe Kolinski, Ronald S. Merkin, Charles Van Hoose, Mary Callaghan, Alanna Hamill, Robert Beaupre, Hamid Dana, Beata Jachulski, and Nannette Rubin.

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "CHARLEY'S AUNT made the trip from Oxford to Marygrove College better than anyone might have expected... the Theater production isn't perfect, mind you. But under the direction of Arthur Beer they have got some things right... Charles VanHosse mercifully has this role right (as the Aunt in drag). He slams around with a maniac zest..."

Christine Brown (DFP) "... if Babberly is correct, the play is a delight. If not, it becomes a bore. Fortunately, The Theater has found the perfect Babberly in Charles Van Hoose... has just the right look of a dandy in drag... the women perform admirably..."

Pam Burgess (VN) "Arthur Beer's skillful direction moved CHARLEY'S AUNT at a fast clip, leaving no time for lulls in the laughter... Berta Jachulski stood out with her cool portrayal of the real aunt."

Title: INQUEST
Written by Donald Freed

"Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were convicted and executed for giving atomic secrets to the Soviet Union... In his review of the Broadway production of INQUEST, Clive Barnes called it 'one of the most gripping courtroom dramas of my experience, from the first polite legal exchanges to the final electric flashes of societies revenge ...a powerful piece of theater.'"

Hathaway, Mary Sierawski, Fred Berning, Kevin Jackunas, Michael DeMarsh, and Joyce Ramsey.

Notes: Chuck Thurston (DPP) "'INQUEST' MOCKS TRIAL"
"In its zeal to show that the Rosenbergs were railroaded, INQUEST loses some of its objectivity by stereotyping the pompous judge, arrogant prosecutor, outlandish press and FBI, weaseling friends and lying relatives."

Jay Carr (DN) "... the play's fundamental flaw... it's rigged. Yet the play is valuable simply for opening the Rosenberg question again... so I forgive it for being a stacked deck and salute David Regal and his school for being enterprising and courageous enough to stage it... the subject matter is riveting and I'm glad (The Theater) took INQUEST on."

Pam Burgess (VN) "The acting in The Theater's production is for the most part excellent... INQUEST succeeds in displaying both fine acting and thought provoking material."

Title: TROJAN WOMEN

Written by Euripides

"Euripides probably wrote THE TROJAN WOMEN to illustrate the exact nature of the senselessness of war: the victors become ignoble and spiteful, the defeated become heroic, and all the wrong people get hurt. As such, this compelling presentation of the utter folly of mass warfare and genocide speaks eloquently to our century."

Wilson, and Robert Beaupre'.

Notes: Craig Reynolds (DFP) "... an hour and a half of unrelenting grief punctuated by horrifying barbarity strains the modern spectators' capacity for sympathetic anguish. TROJAN WOMEN reduces aesthetic distance to about three feet up-wind of a blast furnace."

Jay Carr (DN) "CAMPUS EURIPIDES WORKS... Certainly, it seemed the easiest for Americans of the 1970's to identify with in Arthur Beer's knowledgeable treatment, which extended to adaptation and incidental music as well as direction... and it is to the credit of Beer and his cast that despite that, despite the widespread greenness of the performers, the message emerges (the barbarity of war)... of all the performers, Sakunah, a.k.a. Denise Delaney came closest to projecting the somber total weight the lines required. Joyce Ramsey's Hercuba had stature, though, and the set and lighting by Lissa Kamalay, Paul Norrenbrock, and Lawrence Szczerba reinforced Euripides pitiless grandeur."

Title: TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA
Written by William Shakespeare
Adapted by John Guare and Mel Shapiro
Lyrics by John Guare Music by Galt MacDermot

"This contemporary version of the Shakespearean comedy was conceived for the New York Public Theater's Mobile Theater tour. ... TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA had even more to say than anyone thought it did, and everyone loved it. Walter Kerr said that 'TWO GENTLEMEN' is inventive, but not too inventive. It knows when to use Shakespeare, when to put him on the telephone, when to doodle freely and musically on themes that might just as well belong to both of us.'"

Title: HOUSE OF BLUE LEAVES

Written by John Guare

"Winner of the 1971 Critics Circle and Obie Awards, this outrageous play was described by the New York Times as an 'enchantly zany, desperately sad, thoroughly original little farce.' And it is wacky: a zoo-keeper/would be song-writer and his loony wife, Bananas, find themselves hosts to an odd assortment of characters on the day in 1963 when Pope Paul arrives in New York to say Mass in Yankee Stadium; the menagerie includes three sightseeing nuns from New Jersey, the zoo-keeper's son, AWOL from the Army and toting a bomb in a box, and a hard-of-hearing Hollywood starlet."

Performers: Special Guest Artist: Max Wright
Rocky Venegas, Alanna Hamill, Evelyn Orback, Mary Callaghan, Katherine Loague, Marie O'Donnell, Denise Blasor-Wilson, John Powers, Robert Beaupre, and Michael Woods.

Notes: Catherine Haven (MC) "The task of unraveling this ball of insanity fails to falter director David Regal who employs two of his brightest stars from his bag of performers. The Theater's guest artist in residence. Max Wright... equally strong is Evelyn Orback as his wife... from the moment she appears on stage - hair mussed, dressed in a shapeless, wrinkled bathrobe and shabby gold slippers - she is a pathetic, vulnerable, poor soul who endears herself to the audience."

Jay Carr (DN) "... Regal, by judicious pacing, minimizes the sprawl in the writing and imparts more shape and cohesiveness than the off-Broadway original..."
6th Season -76/77- Show Dates from Nov 5 to Nov 21. 1976

Title: U.S.A. (A New Musical Version)

Written by Paul Shyre and John Dos Passos

"This new musical adaptation of Dos Passos' dramatic revue, first presented in New York in 1959 and featuring William Windom and Sara Thompson, presents a cavalcade of American sentiment in the first third of the Twentieth Century. Through a network of biological sketches - including Valentino, Isadora Duncan, and Henry Ford - authentic newsreel headlines, and music of the period, juxtaposed with a fictional story about abuses and personal consequences of power in America, U.S.A. is a living chronicle of the author's up-and-down love affair with his country."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Musical Director: Norah Duncan IV. Tech Director:

Set Design: Paul A. Norrenbrock

Costume Design: Denise Blasor-Wilson

Light Designer: Lawrence Szczersba

A.D.: Rochele Rosenthal Stage Manager: Kim Westhaus

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "Director Joyce Ramsay deploys the attractive cast resourcefully and alertly... overall, the evening had the light slick feel of a TV special rather than a musical stage version of Dos Passos's particular vision. There just isn't enough Dos Passos in this U.S.A."
6th Season -76/77- Show Dates from Dec 10 to Dec 19, 1976

Title: A CRY OF PLAYERS

Written by William Gibson

"Very little is known about the young manhood of William Shakespeare, about the years between 1584, when he was twenty years old, and 1592, when he first attracted attention in London as an actor and playwright. Based on the few facts that are available, William Gibson has fashioned a fresh interpretation of the possible motives that lured Shakespeare, driven by his creative urge, from his hometown Stratford and his family. As such A CRY OF PLAYERS is a serious and deeply satisfying look at the painful emergence of a genius."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Director: Arthur J. Beer, Jr. Tech Director: Joseph Zubrick

Set Design: Paul A. Norrenbrock Costumes: Judith Meldrum

Lighting Design: Joseph Zubrick

A.D.: Mary Lynn Kacir Stage Manager: Annette Madias

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "PLAY ABOUT SHAKESPEARE A WINNER!"
"My guess is that William Gibson was young when he wrote A CRY OF PLAYERS. Currently being staged at The Theater... it seems in several ways a young man's play. The daring and the language make me think so. So do the nature of the miscalculations. And so does its triumph in spite of them."

Craig Reynolds (MCN) "Joe Kolinski played Will with the amalgam of fire, fury, fun, and exquisite tenderness. Alanna Hamil matched him beat for beat as the simpler but no less strong Ann. Marie O'Donnell was barmaid Jenny, as much a pleasure as a difficulty for Will - and most of mankind. Robert Mounts was a smooth Sir Thomas, and Myron Papich crafted Richards with his typically excellent technique.

Title: A STREETCAR NAMED DESIRE

Written by Tennessee Williams

"Critics have hailed STREETCAR as Tennessee Williams' greatest work. The play opened in New York in 1947 and featured Marlon Brando, Kim Hunter, Jessica Tandy, and Karl Malden. A tragic drama of self-delusion and madness, it chronicles the character of Blanche DuBois a fading beauty whose distorted romantic illusions have swept away and kept hidden all traces of reality. Williams' treatment of Blanche and of Stanley Kowalski, her earthy brother-in-law, are among the most brilliant characterizations in modern dramatic literature."

Performances 9  Where: The Theater (Marvqrove)

Director: Dr. Bill J. Harbin  Tech Director: Joseph Zubrick

Costume Design: Verna Finley

A.D.: Bill Mathaway  Stage Manager: Lawrence Szczerba

Performers: David Regal as Stanley Kowalski, Marlene Johnson.

Cynthia Harris, Alanna Hamill, Myron C. Papich, Robert Beaupre.

Marsha Perry, Janna Gjesdal, Guillerma A. Resto, Rod Moeller, Jeannette Linahan, and Stan Taylor.

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "STREETCAR ROLLS ALONG" "The production has been guided with resourcefulness and intelligence by Bill Harbin.

It is enhanced by Paul Norrenbrock's evocative lighting and set.

But the play rises and falls on its Stanley and Blanche. Regal is a craftsman, and eventually his austere, sullen, tightly reined Stanley takes hold. We can believe he is a man who smashes things, we can believe his crude strength, and we can believe he has feelings too, as we watch his face when he stands concealed and listens to his sister-in-law characterize him as a neanderthal slob. But the surprise is Janna Gjesdal's Blanche..."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "Perhaps in some tongue the mysterious name Janna Gjesdal means 'white woods,' just as the name Blanche DuBois does in French. If true it would be poetic justice since the wispy Miss Gjesdal is Blanche DuBois in every other way..."
6th Season -76/77- Show Dates from March 4 to March 20, 1977

Written by William Shakespeare

"Petruchio sings and Katharina sings, but it's not KISS ME KATE. Director Arthur Beer brings to the stage this immortal battle of the sexes in a fresh, contemporary setting featuring a new musical score. The lovers join the world of mods and rockers - motorcycles, boutiques, and the sunshine life - in a production that does not sacrifice the word of the playwright. This comic masterpiece is populated by many of Shakespeare's most enduring characters; he has given them scenes of highly inventive craftsmanship with language that abounds in poetic wit and good humor."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Music By Robert R. Beaupre' Lyrics by Dr. Arthur J. Beer
Set Design by Mindy Farbrother and Paul A. Norrenbrock
Lighting by Joseph Zubrick Costumes by Judith Meldrum
A.D.: Debi Raucher Stage Manager: Mindy Farbrother

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "My advice to you is to stick with this new musical version... it grows on you. It also gets better in the second act. That's because (the play) gets more musical and less Shakespeare. Music comes more naturally to the attractive young cast than Shakespeare... This version is sunnier than the original... Beer shuffles the cast expertly...."

Title:  THE BOYS IN THE BAND

Written by  Mort Crowley

"Michael is a homosexual. Michael's friends are homosexuals. Michael's roommate from college is not, and when they all meet at a birthday celebration, the clash of life styles is inevitable. THE BOYS IN THE BAND is witty, funny, sad, honest and uncompromising. This is not a play about a homosexual, but a play that takes the homosexual way of life for granted and uses this as a valid basis for human experience... the power of the play is the way in which it remorselessly peels away the pretensions of its characters.' New York Times."

Performances  9  Where:  The Theater  (Marygrove)

Director  David Regal    Tech Director: Joseph Zubrick

Set Designer: Kimberly Roth Westhaus

Costumes Design: Judith Meldrum    Lighting: Mindy Farbrother

A.D.: Jan Gaffney    Stage Manager: Fred Berning

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "Best to regard (the play) as entertainment and as a juicy occasion for ensemble acting... David Regal, seems aware that the play's pretensions toward liberating breakthrough have diminished with the years and, to his credit, plays it much less stridently... Reinecker unfurled Michael's hostility convincingly. While VanHoose... did convey his man's cool savvy. But I especially liked Michael Ceresko... and Robert R. Beaupre was the best of the several actors I've seen attempt this role..."

Gregg Shields (VN) "Just in case you have not heard, BOYS IN THE BAND is not a musical... It is however a superbly executed piece of drama... strong scenes by the entire cast... bring together a very touching and human portrait of a few hours of nine people's lives."
Title: THE BRIG
Written by Kenneth H. Brown Adapted by David Regal

"A brutally intense examination of the indiscriminate allocation of power (and its abuses), THE BRIG presents a savagely accurate account of the dehumanizing effects of the discipline that is often used to achieve 'order.'"

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Lighting Design: N. Deborah Hazlett
A.D.: Yvonne Portia Bowen Stage Manager: Nanette Ayers
Light Board: Floretta Johnson Sound Board: Roland Hinds
Prop Master: Angela Odom, Lee Van Paassen

Notes: Lawrence DeVine: (DFP) "THE BRIG is the logical extension of Sarte's idea that hell is other people... Regal's production affirms just that: It says to you that you do not ever EVER want to be in that brig... Regal's actors playing the 11 prisoners are not people they are numbers. Regal's direction, rightly, is like a drill sergeant's; he would be hell at Parris Island. (His cast rehearsed under strict military conditions. Muff a line - 10 push ups!) Perhaps the Theater's THE BRIG is not for the squeamish. But this cast is rightly so mechanized and so relentlessly in character that the show is hypnotic. It keeps the viewer's attention riveted on the stage."

Note: THE BRIG was performed on the stage of the Eisenhower Theater at the Kennedy Center in Washington D.C. as a winner of the 10th annual American College Theater Awards. That year there were 430 entries and seven winners.

Title: THE RUNNER STUMBLES

Written by Milan Stitt

Prop Master: Tony Randazzo Lee Van Paasen

Greg Olszewski, and Nanette Ayers.

Notes: Lawrence DeVine: (DFP) "... an opportunity to watch David Regal really get it right... a naturally turbulent, physical actor. he has, as Father Rivard, managed to bank all the internal fires. Regal suggests rather than spraying it around the stage. right on the money with French poet Mallarme's dictum that to suggest is to create, when to explain is to destroy... Joe Zubrick's expert lighting... the last act scene between Regal... and O'Donnell has been telegraphed long before. But when it comes, it is so well performed that the scene is a carillon of conflict, ritual obsessions versus natural ones... when staged as perceptively as this is by Arthur Beer has much to say about passion and repression. Regal dominates the play but it would be a mistake to underestimate the performance of Marie O'Donnell... the set by N. Marie Hazlett makes it look easy.""

Note: Milan Stitt, the author, came to see the play. After the performance, he came up on the stage to congratulate the cast and director... Sent a card to the TTC saying: "Many thanks for your excellent production of RUNNER. You got damn near all I ever intended. Again, many thanks..." signed "Milan Stitt."

Light Board: Mindy Farbrother    Sound: James Bowen
& Suzy Linahan

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Scrooge, idol of drama critics... is back at The Theater... ensemble effects, helped greatly by Janet Bobcean's 19th Century costumes, add considerable style to the look of the show. Arthur Beer as the miserly Scrooge is not pink cheeked by a long chalk. Beer is very droll in his mutton chops and medal-rimmed glasses that make his eyes look all the more mean and squinty. Around him are all manner of old friends from The Theater..."

Michigan Catholic (Greg Shields) "Director Rust has great fun with the spirits and the ghost of... Jacob Marley. John Powers as Marley is rigged with some kind of wireless microphone that reverberates his voice in an eerie echo that's enough to shake even a grown up's spine... Paula Brown, Ernest White, and Joe Wilson, all turn in performances that any actor would cherish... Actually it's a shame that there are over forty actors in the play, not that is too many, but we just can't mention them all by name for their outstanding performances."

Title: THE LOWER DEPTHS

Written by Maxim Gorki

"Considered a classic of modern drama, this masterwork deals with the 'down andouters' of society - thieves, pilgrims, and prostitutes that swarmed into Russia's slum tenements at the turn of the century."

Notes: Horst Mann (Detroit Monitor) "Maxim Gorki's THE LOWER DEPTHS is definitely depressing and most certainly dull. But the Theater of U-D has transformed this play into a mellow mood piece with some credibility... (The performance has) several strong characters who dominate (and) give it the strength to hold an audience for more than 10 minutes... Best performances were given by John Powers... Robert Mounts... Arthur Beer... Veronica Froelich... and Suzy Linahan."
Title: LITTLE MARY SUNSHINE

Book, music, and lyrics by Rick Besoyan

"This loving lampoon of old-time operettas pokes gentle fun at all the cliches of those innocent musicals that our grandparents enjoyed. Complete with 24 songs, the plot features mounted rangers, a chorus of simpering schoolgirls, and a dastardly villainous Indian."

Notes: Jay Carri (DN) "'LITTLE MARY SUNSHINE' SUCCEEDS AS BLEND OF PARODY AND REAL THING." "... the evening hangs in there on the sheer sunniness of spirit... Arthur Beer's staging wisely and mercifully resisted campiness... Johnson admirably deadpanned his way through the big chief's role, and I liked Miss Wagner's padded Teutonic nightingale. But my favorite was the comatose Indian guide, played with splendid blankness by James Bowen."

Larry DeVine, (DFP) "SLAPSTICK CLOUDS 'MARY SUNSHINE'" "... the Theater has been acquitting itself well this season... Nobody's season is perfect... the show is smart, and this version makes it just silly. Silly gets tiresome very quickly. The best work is by the choruses..."

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "The play has been staged with intelligence and impact by David Regal, but it seems to me that the staging mistakenly stayed almost exclusively in the naturalistic realm, undercutting its nightmarish potential. Late in the play the captain asks himself if he's been dreaming, says nothing solid. But we haven't taken that slide into dissolving reality with him... Beer is fine, lacking only the final shock of a man stripped of innocence... John Hardy is a commanding Babu... it remains a gripping work of gigantic moral force."

Larry DeVine (DFF) "Director David L. Regal's production is a lively rebuke to the lazy who don't care much for Lowell as a poet and thus may tend to disregard his drama. I have not seen many more interesting evenings at the U-D Theater that this one... Arthur Beer as Delano is consistent and perceptive... Beer speaks Lowell's heavily charged verse naturally and well, and his presence on the deck... is first rank. The tattered ship's setting for these performers is by Salvatore Lupo."

Notes: Walt Turowski (VN) "The production (despite 3 hour length) was usually fast paced with outstanding comic acting by John Powers and Rocky Venegas: also Eric M. Johnson and Chris Darga brought new meaning to the word 'soldier.' Linda Arons played the governor's wife so broadly that it is hard to believe she could do it with a straight face but she does... very entertaining."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "For reasons best known to itself, the Theater has launched the gargantuan Brecht classic THE CAUCASIAN CHALK CIRCLE, that massive (73 roles) play about justice for the little man... Alan Rust is a formidable performer, godlike, above the action. Rust is wise to play's social x-rays... the set is by Salvatore Lupo. The herculean direction is by Arthur Beer."

Notes: Larry DeVine: (DFP) 'MOLIERE'S SILLINESS EXPLOITED TO THE HILT' "The Theater's IMAGINARY INVALID is giddy and vertiginous all right, done with obvious broad strokes that begin with the extended blowing of the title character's nose and are seldom more subtle thereafter. The nose in question belongs to David Regal as Argan...Lest anyone think that the company is being too serious about IMAGINARY INVALID, the designer has them tricked out in gaudy costumes that no one wears who is NOT appearing in the IMAGINARY INVALID. This means a kelly green suit for Argan's brother, shimmering pink combinations for the young lovers, even a suit for the medical swain's father that somehow is garish even though it's black...this bunch is free to fulfill all the potential silliness of the play by turning it into a free-spoken romp. And so they did... sensible Beralde is very smoothly played by Arthur Beer, a sensible actor (in the funny green suit)... his last act scene with Argan is polished acting... the star is Regal. He captures Argan's crazed hypochondria..."

Ryan Husaynu (VN) "The most 'alive' character, played by Nancy Pollack, is Argan's maid and nurse..."

This bunch of house quests is played by a uniformly strong cast, each of whom contributes some truth and some humanity... are all very good at being very real."

Jay Carr (DN) "MOONCHILDREN is really a sad comedy about transitoriness. It's a lot like LA BOHEME without the music and The Theater is staging it with distinction."

Title: THE CURATE/SHAKESPEARE AS YOU LIKE IT

Written by Don Nigro and William Shakespeare

"Set in a broken down acting troupe in the hinterlands, the Curate must fill gaps in his company's production of "As You Like It" because his lead actors and actresses have left the company for one reason or another. A back stage view of the chaos that all too often is theater."

A.D.: Maria Petrella Stage Manager: Annette Madias

Performers: Eric Johnson, Mark Hennen, Edmond Guay, Chris Darga.

Claudia Hommel, Patricia Hicok, and Angelina Fiordellisi.

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "One's interest is held by watching how this young playwright is going to extricate himself from the corner he's painted himself into, how he's going to get the troupe out of this mess... His solutions are at least resourceful. Nigro isn't Stoppard or Pirandello, extracting new facets of fascinating ambiguities from familiar material. But the troupe under Arthur Beer's direction steps through his play brightly and earnestly. The set and lighting, by Salvatore Lupo and Janet Bobcean, was exceptional, especially the enchanting tatterdemalion Forest of Arden. hauled into instant radiance from a pile of rags onstage."

Note: Joseph Papp, founder of the New York Shakespeare Festival, was given the "Father John P. McNichols Distinguished Achievement Award" at dinner in his honor before the play. The introductory remarks were handled with awe and aplomb by David L. Regal, Chairman of the Theater Department at the University of Detroit.

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "THEY SING NICELY, BUT THEN IT'S THE END"

"As glossy and poetic as it always sounds, the end of the rainbow after all is still The End. It is poetry at cross-purposes - what we call ironic - that The Theater has chosen THE FANTASTICKS to close eight seasons in that theater full of blue seats and walnut stained wood on the Marygrove campus. Next season, Regal's company is moving to the larger theater in the Northwest Activities Center... that should be a fine place.

"THE FANTASTICKS is sung nicely by two attractive young people, as the star-crossed boy and girl next door. Marcus Neville and Heidi Hepler... El Gallo, the godlike narrator and gentle bandit, is handsomely enacted by Alan Rust."

Stage Manager: Yvonne Bowen

Performers: David Regal as the psychiatrist, Irwin Jackson, and Chris Darga

Notes: Jay Carr (DN)"BERSERKNESS HONORED - AND A LIFE DESTROYED"

"Irony is piled upon irony, outrage upon outrage, until a decent black man cracks. The biggest irony of all may be that Detroit isn't seeing this important play until now... It's first Michigan production at the University of Detroit's tiny Studio 100 is a gripping one. Almost implausibly so, for the play's devices are transparently simple. There never is any attempt to hide the rageing. The evening essentially consists of a dramatic monologue on which the soulsick veteran bounces his harrowing memories off a psychiatrist in a veteran's hospital in Valley Forge...

"Regal's is an adroitly gauged performance in a difficult format. And the veteran played by Irwin Jackson is unforgettable... (he) is... totally immersed in the role of the anguished survivor, filling the stage with the most heart-wrenching performance I've seen this season...

"THE METAL OF HONOR RAG avoids propaganda and banality. Given in retrospect, it stimulates a salutary consideration of why our society seemed ready to explode in the late '60's and early '70's. It's linking of social upheaval to Vietnam may come as hindsight but hindsight is better than so sight. Any undertaking that makes human decency not only it's first casualty, but it's likeliest, must be questioned, and this Joseph Zubrick staging at the tiny Studio 100 does, honorably and absorbingly."

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "A DOWNHILL SLIDE. AN UPHILL SHOW"
"We believe that Irvin Jackson and Angelina Fiordellisi are passionately attracted to each other. There is a warmth and urgency in their exchanges and embraces. But we also feel the touchiness about rejection simmering just beneath the surface. Jackson... magnificently powers this huge locomotive of a role... without the epic scale Jackson suggests, the play would collapse... Fiordellisi is a compelling actress... David Regal keeps the traffic moving."

Larry Devine (DFP) "YOUNG COMPANY LOSES DECISION TO 'GREAT WHITE HOPE'

"Anyone who has seen James Earl Jones in this role can never be satisfied with anyone else. That being said... Irvin Jackson's Jefferson is the picture of an actor fighting a role... The Theater Company - which used to be The Theater - makes use of some two dozen actors in forty roles. It's a tricky effort which means many of the smaller roles are perforce played by beginners and this often shows. In the leading roles are some good character roles..."

Mark Pattison (South End) "Alan Rust... his slow measured interpretation shines... Fiordellisi is sublime... John W. Handy is the backbone of THE GREAT WHITE HOPE... Company veterans make a strong showing but most of the newer members stay down for the count."

Notes: Clifford Ridley (DN) "'PRIVATE LIVES' DOES VERY NICELY, THANK YOU!"
"I wish I had space to detail every loving bit of business, every inspired take and beat that director Arthur J. Beer has brought to the realization of all this - the advances and retreats, the nibbling at fingers and brandishing of cigarettes and maniac dancing offered not merely for our amusement, but understanding as well... Beer's achievement is to place his laughs in the service of his people rather than the reverse... Rust is every inch the suave gent who has seen the world and made it his own: Fiordellisi is as jagged with sophistication' as anyone could wish: together they turn Coward's barbed banter into the contrapuntal threads of a romantic string quartet..."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "A BEAUTIFUL METEOR, A FAULTY PRODUCTION"
"PRIVATE LIVES is as foreign to American actors as Kabuki. A production that lacks Coward's extra-dry English high style is in trouble. That means the voices, the accents, the lush details (must carry the play). Rust's English accent comes and goes... As Donald Barthelime quoted Le Corbusier recently, 'God is in the details.'... Angelina Fiordellisi, who recently has demonstrated that any production with her in it is also a swell place to be."

Howard Brubaker (VN) "... portrayed with such meticulous accuracy that you could almost believe that this is how Coward wanted it to be... The company must be commended for their attention to detail... Unfortunately, it is played in a location that is just barely bigger than twenty dorm rooms."

What's even better is his integrating the 431 BC story with the 1820's setting - calling in actual black Haitian general Jean-Pierre Boyer as the impotent Aegus figure. for instance, and adding in the era's Caribbean black unrest... certainly one is happy to recognize something adventurous like this show, and the willingness to take a chance by The Theater Company at it's new home at the Paul Robeson. Arguing with the production does not mean it's not admirable..."

Michael Betzold (HCN) "... a finely-sculptured, expertly set, and boldly-enacted drama of classic Greek proportions with a new cutting edge - the clash of African and European cultures... the most striking thing about 'MEDEA...' is a set that directly, colorfully and dramatically conjures up the space and time of pagan ritual... Janis Nelson is a regal, furious and a violent Medea, a true black princess... sedated and civilized (David Regal) is almost effortless... Ditto Lord Corinth (Robert Mounts)... But the show is stolen by Nefta Banks, at beginning and end... Banks gives a bravura performance.

"Beer's direction is also first rate... the intelligence of his (as writer) transformation is abundantly manifest..."
Title: AMERICAN BUFFALO

Written by David Mamet

"The play is set in Don's Resale Shop where Don, his friend Teach, and Don's young friend Bobby are making plans to steal a valuable coin collection. Their prospective victim, a chance customer in the junkshop, had discovered a rare buffalo head nickel in it for $90.00. Don, recalling the man's arrogant behavior, decides to steal the coin back."

Stage Manager: Nannette Shafer

Performers: Arthur J. Beer, David L. Regal, Marcus Neville

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "U-D'S COMEDY IS WORTH MORE THAN A PLUG NICKEL!"

"Capturing a situation by pith of its characters talk is what Mamet is expert at. That is, you could wait a long time for anything momentous to happen in most of his plays; plot turns, to Mamet, are secondary to talking about them... Regal, playing Teach at a blast furnace level of cocky loudness, is marvelous, never missing a beat in Mamet's idiosyncratic rhythm of braggadocio. Beer's frustrated Don is the avuncular type, very delicately played as a man not quite bright enough to be a Chicago Fagin. And Marcus Neville is exquisite as poor Bobby, lank hair curling down on his chubby levi's jacket, chin a tremble, so vulnerable he's a rag doll to these other two big shooters. The set is a wonderfully foul place full of fatigued appliances, paperbacks, half a bicycle and wrecked chairs - the kind of place that gives 'rats' nest' a good name."

Notes: Jay Carr (DN) "'COOK:' A SINGLE ENTREE SERVES A 3-COURSE FEAST!"

"... as performed by Alan Rust at the U-D's Studio 100, it is always interesting and often moving... Rust is sensitive enough to make us feel the emotional cost of Cook's dutiful self-sacrifice and even more remarkable, that of his patient wife, Elizabeth, whom we never see, but whose presence becomes more and more palpable... actor Rust, director Regal, never use Cook. Their understated approach, with its minimum of poetic license, argues more vigorously and more poignantly for this exceptional man than any sensationalizing could."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "'CAPTAIN COOK' DOESN'T SAIL WITH FULL WIND!"

"Rust recounts the travel stories which is informational but not highly dramatic. The interplay of characters that defines the best drama is obviously missing... if the playwright laced (the play) with much wit or dramatic moment, that escapes me... As professional as Rust is, the subject just screams for other actors to flesh out the play..." Almost all this year's talent will return next year... where they will perform next season is subject to current negotiations and the indubitable good will of U-D and Marygrove administrators... Whatever happens, one hopes The Theater Company will keep a tight hold on U-D's Studio 100. Regal's baby that's been home to such fine work this season as PRIVATE LIVES and AMERICAN BUFFALO."

"LIGHT UP THE SKY is probably the funniest comedy we have about show business. period. One simply forgets how wonderful Moss Hart's 1948 farce is. All it takes to remind us, however, is a rambunctious revival like Alan Rust's staging at The Theater Company... production teems with the kind of zest that young actors generate once they get the chance to lampoon their elders... Chris Darga, in bear grease John Barrymore hairdo and mustache, is rowdily flamboyant... Charles Van Hoose sort of pins down how bizarre the scene is when he describes opening at the Colonial Theater as 'magic time'... and the star herself? She is played by Angelina Fiordellisi, a light of this company for two years, wafting that boa around like Tallulah..."

Jay Carr (DN) "... much more right than wrong with DEVOUR THE SNOW. It's one of the glories of an already better-than-average Detroit theater season... David Regal is at his best when he lets his rigid facade crack enough to show that he can be moved by the force of truth... always interesting Richard Knox is riveting as the fanatic... Knox and Angelina Fiordellisi in fact demonstrate how good actors act even when they don't have a line... Beer and Fiordellisi look like daguerreotypes come to life and their phasing and facial expressions eloquently reflect the rebuffs they suffer... John Puchalski, as the nuking, oafish sheriff, looked exactly right in Mark Choiński's rough timbered, barrel-laden setting. And Mary Bremer had her moment as the prosecutor's wife who turned into a surprise witness for the accused."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "... ensemble work that is so good... to instantly energize the outset of the second act is the appearance of Earl D.A. Smith as a wily mountain man, a venal trapper, perhaps a little mad. Smith is a dynamo on stage. He is so wrought up in this part that when his growling big voice comes up from the depths of a bulky costume of skins it seems as if some beast of the Sierras is prowling the room... Best without question is Arthur J. Beer as Keseberg... Beer's acting shows a mind and a heart coming apart."

I'd say Susann Brinkley knows where to go with this play... Janet Bobcean's pig-pen setting zeroes right in..."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "THESE 'MARIGOLDS' HAVE SOME GROWING TO DO!"

"... a good play too, not undeceptive, that looks as if Zindel is writing about a tunnel when he's really writing about the light... So what went wrong with the work of these five actresses - and one female director? Each actress can hardly be faulted on her own. Put them all together, however, and they do not spell MARIGOLDS. All that's missing here is the blend, the sympathy, the evasive sense of a family... It's not hard to see, though, that the Studio 100 itself is no help..."

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFF) Headline: "Chilling Drama Overcomes Weak Script." "There is something poetically just about the production of TERRA NOVA... both the play and the company's production have to do with valor in the face of fickle odds... traditionally, the Theater Company has doggedly rushed in where angels fear to tread... good for the Theater Company. Under the stage's own kind of pressure, they have come through... the production is tense and empathic. and you can feel the chill in the men's marrow... The ensemble acting is expertly done, with an obvious bond among actors that gives them a unity and also allows each one individualism... Arthur J. Beer's Amundsen is fraught with dignity and a kind of austere kindness. Beer is some asset to this company..."

Kevin Boyle (VN) "David Regal is brilliant as Scott... TERRA NOVA takes the audience through a gamut of emotions: courage, terror, pathos, bravado, determination, resignation, exaltation, and depression."

and Tim Alvaro.

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "It is the perfect play to show up late for. Director Arthur J. Beer's young cast, as if sensing its third act has all the lines, plays the scene for all its worth... Entertainment is what one finally gets late in the production. As well, there is considerable satisfaction in seeing stage newcomers like Amy Yasbeck... Tim Alvaro... and Julie Sanford... when one begins to see that each of them has a brain of his or her own... Harry Wetzel plays Nicola, competently, of course, for Wetzel is an actor of many facets - but with a trace of nastiness..."

Clifford A Ridley (DN) Headline: "A TOUGH COOKIE - BUT U-D ROLLS WITH IT." "... The Theater Company's mostly delectable production is a noteworthy achievement... I run it by you in some detail to suggest that it's not easy to portray characters who are, for the most part, themselves playing characters of their own invention. But at UofD, under the knowing direction of Arthur J. Beer, the performers are quite up to the mark... Mary Bremer's flibbertigibbet of a mother, hellbent on doing the right thing regardless of the cost... Miss Sanford is a first rate comedienne who convinces us utterly of Raina's transformation... Knox gives us a Bluntschli of more dimension and fewer comic tics than we are used to..."

Performers: Earl D.A. Smith, Leslie Gay Lease, Debbie Patrick, Michael Woods, Kendra Carson, Harold Moore, Julie Sanford, and Arlease Tatum Smith.

Notes: Kevin Boyle (VN) "HOME. the Theater Company's latest production is a story of roller coasters. It's also about the Theater itself, and the timing couldn't be any better.

"Tucked away in the cozy confines of Shiple's Studio 100. HOME is a modest play with aspirations of greatness - a work so simple and straightforward its significance is likely to slip right by, hidden by a blend of good humor and pathos.

"On the surface. HOME is simply a story of Cephus Miles, a young Southern black man, and his struggle to come to terms with himself, his dreams and his world. Cephus, played brilliantly by Earl D.A. Smith, is a figure of tremendous strength. He asks for nothing but the right to work his land; to dedicate his soul to a life that doesn't offer greatness or acclaim, but rather deep, personal satisfaction.

"When Company Artistic Director David Regal picked the play last year he had no idea just how much the play would come to represent. Cephus has really become a metaphor for the Company. Like him, the Theater has modest hopes: quality college theater in a tiny department. But threats of lay-offs and elimination came close to destroying the Theater last semester. Now, with HOME, the Company announces it is here to stay.

"And what a glorious way to do it. Earl D.A. Smith is awesome... For the Theater Company and the U-D Community, the play is even more. It is a statement of purpose, and of victory. Welcome home."

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP): "More than once Beer reminds you of Ralph Richardson... this non-musical Beer putting acting where duller men put songs... Fiordellisi's song 'Aldonza' is a volcanic moment, one that defines her characters bitterness with a lava of passion."

Susan Slobojan (DN): "... an enthusiastic and admirably supple cast worked hard to triumph... they threw themselves around a wonderfully workable set with the aplomb of seasoned acrobats...
The Theater Company's staging flowed beautifully. Mark Choinski's dungeon set, with its hay bales and stone blocks and iron pole gratings, was a marvel of ingenuity. And director Smith made wonderful use of its flexibility... Melinda Pacha's rag-tag Costumes for this production were some of the finest I've seen on any Detroit stage."

Notes: Clifford A. Ridley (DN) "... Mar Riehl is utterly harrowing, a wounded animal striking blindly at everything about her. Chilling us with the magnitude of her torment and the depth of her despair. Ms Riehl has made that pain palpable; it is a considerable achievement. For the most part, however, THE LADY FROM DUBUQUE works as stagecraft because of two grand characters, Elizabeth and Oscar; and in Joyce Feurring and Harold W. Moore the Theater Company has the performers to bring them to grandly eccentric life... they are a delight, singly and together. David Regal has directed the play as the chamber work it is. deftly varying its shading and dynamics."

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFF) "Ordinarily, being strange and sordid would be curse enough for a play. But HEAT, a numbing visit from the Great American Southwest, is also boring... HEAT... an exasperating two hours and thirty minutes of mixed violence... the performances are not exceptional enough to elevate HEAT very far out of its pointless squalor."

This definition of boredom from the play: "The boy lived next door to me. He's read the obituary notices everyday and cross the names out of the phone book."

Jay Carr (DN), "HEAT... begins by filling our eyes with macho icons. A montage of Camel cigarette billboards fills the rear space. Stage right is dominated by a black Chevy Biscayne of the late '60's.... The play doesn't avoid boring us from time to time but in so doing it makes a crushingly convincing case for boredom and alienation as major causes of crime... The acting is arresting... the (actors) emerge just as vividly in the harsh glare of Hauptman's unsentimentalized, hard-edged perspective."

Notes: Diane Haithman (DPP) "But the inventive performances of the five promising leading actresses of the Theater Company outshine the drab material. The acting opening night was consistently high..."

"Yasbeck, whose pouty face and husky voice make her a natural... also manages to seem disarmingly innocent: Laurie Johnson plays Marta with just the right amount of slightly defensive spunk and a flawless German accent... Martin keeps Margaret from being as gloomy as she might have been... But, most fun to watch is the long suffering Mar Riehl as Eve..."

Jay Carr (DN) "Murrell's dramatic collage has long been over-due for its Michigan premiere, and I'm happy to report that this staging by David Regal does shinning justice to the heart and dignity of Canadian womanhood that Murrell compels us to celebrate with him." "And suffice it to say that little Geraldine Regal stole the show."

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFF) "WISE CHILD is a creep's play. Unpleasant and pointless, it was produced anyhow by the Theater Company, which regularly takes admirable gambles with lesser-known authors... but no one ever said the Theater Company was perfect.

"David L. Regal plays the older bozo listed as Mrs. Artminster, in an awful get-up (including a navy blue pillbox hat and quite large pumps and a burlesque accent that, at first, you think may be rather funny (but not for two hours and thirty five minutes). Tim Alvaro plays the whining youth with a neurasthenic awtulness... As the middle-aged, homosexual hotel owner, Arthur Beer gives a performance that is pitiable because he so fine an actor and the role is so embarrassing. The direction is by Earl D.A. Smith, who seldom does anything disappointing, but he never got mixed up in WISE CHILD before either."

Jay Carr (DN). "... and Quinta Good is the fetching chambermaid who deserves better company."

Title: PAUL ROBESON

Written by Phillip Hayes Dean

"Earl D.A. Smith is featured in this explosive new drama that transforms the phenomenon know as Paul Robeson into a moving theatrical experience. It traces Robeson's long, tumultuous and astonishing career. Among the first blacks at Rutgers, All-American football end, actor, singer, political activist... he was America's Renaissance Man - and America rejected him. Here, with all his wit, sensitivity and passion, is how he fought back."

Diane Haithman (DFP) "Earl D.A. Smith fully deserved the standing ovation he received during an opening weeks performance of The Theater Company's sterling almost one man play PAUL ROBESON..."

"Before Smith enters, the stage is empty save for a bust of Robeson and a baby grand piano, on which sits a silver bud vase bearing one white rose. Above the rose is a small pick spotlight, which lends the rose its own bright, fresh color on the darkened stage. The image grows; Smith's performance has that same sort of simplicity and power.

"Henry Ford II is Robeson's friend and accompanist Lawrence Brown. He sits at the grand piano throughout, playing stirring mood music and some familiar songs Robeson performed. His singing with Smith of OLD MAN RIVER sends chills up and down one's spine and cast and audience join in singing WE ARE CLIMBING JACOB'S LADDER at play's finale... great theater."

Written by Ed Gracyzk

"In a small Texas town as small and as forlorn as the dust hole in Peter Bordonovich's THE LAST PICTURE SHOW, members of the 'Disciples of James Dean' troop in for their twenty year reunion. Notes: Detroit Premiere: Larry DeVine (DFP) "JIMMY DEAN... is a real jewel among yule offerings... David regal's iconoclastic gang barges into December with COME BACK TO... which is so outlandish as to almost beggar description... This is not a dull evening... they do it with a kind of Pecos Gothic style, with twangs never heard in west Texas, in cowboy boots and mini-dresses and, for the terrific Mary Bremer as the dimestore proprietress, a hairnet and baggy nylons of surpassing tackiness. Deanna Dunagan... achieves with ease whatever strange utterances are called for in this play. Jaye Cooper is a glamorous Sissy, rightly looking sad and soiled around the edges. Eileen Elliot, a formidable physical presence, is Joanne."

Ed Hayman (DN) "...Regal has choreographed much of this almost as if it were an ice show production number, neatly having characters then and now mirror each other. And Mark Choiniski's set is an affectionate statement by itself - a one room dime store with real lunch counter, a fan that worked in 1955 but doesn't in 1975... looks like the props people had a lot of fun putting this together."

Notes: John Smyntek (DFP) "Perhaps the best thing about the Theater Company's reprise of the Catholic comedy/melodrama MASS APPEAL is that director Arthur Beer and co-star David Regal do much better with it than the work's author, Bill C. Davis, and seasoned actor Brian Keith did at the Birmingham just over a year ago... At U-D Jesuit, Beer and Regal and John Lark... streamline the play's sometimes talky moments, focus on the dramatic message and leave the audience with a laugh and something more serious to think about. That is how it should be... and director Beer ought to get a plenary indulgence for doing better with the play than the playwright."

Ed Hayman (DN) "Regal's rambling, expansive Fr. Farley inspired this comment from (the audience): 'He's just like the priest I grew up with.' Regal has the priest's avuncular pulpit manner, his bemused cynicism and his basic good nature down pat... Lark is sincere enough as Dolson... Mark Choinski's set - a pulpit, a few wooden panels and some well-chosen pieces of furniture - evoke the old church and its comfortable rectory handily."

Notes: Ed Havman (DN) "Beer throws himself into the role with the zest of a silent film comedian, physically acting out every burst of fake churchly fervor, every calculatedly greedy admission. It's a bravura Tartuffe, like the production in which it is the center piece - broadly farcical and stylized and played flat-out for laughs."

Larry DeVine (DPP): "'TARTUFFE' HAMS IT UP" "The fine look of the production comes from Melinda Pacha's set and costumes and the lighting by Mark Choinski and Tim Alvaro, Lillian Rosander, a newcomer to the troupe with much polish, has superb moments at the beginning and end... Maggie Wysocki is the bubbly maid, a tough part... Tim Kilbride is just delightful for as long as he's around as the young swain.

"The staging of TARTUFFE was begun by Earl D.A. Smith and when Smith fell ill, was taken over in succession by Beer and then by company artistic director David L. Regal. Obviously, that must have caused difficulties. But there is always Moliere's Law: One black suit and one good clown are half the battle."

Anita Barone, and Shirley Benwas

* Run extended through Nov 16-17 because of demand.

Notes:  Larry DeVine (DFP) "... is a memoir so chock-full of good feeling... Anyone would be hard pressed to find a better actor for Charlie than Dana Gamarra... The unobtrusive direction of Arthur Beer, who indicates that he was once 14 and learned something from it."

Ed Havman (DN) "Wonderful things happen when a theater finds a play that's just right for it... splendid UD cast... here's a group of sharp students playing roles that are absolutely right for them, dealing with material as real to them as their own lives... Miss Bremer is a wonderfully instinctive actress with expressive eyes and a gentle Southern accent... hers is a wonderfully fluid performance. Mark Choinski's set, a tree framed, elongated cabin with a swing in the center, provides the ideal environment for Gurney's remembrance."

Title: THE LION IN WINTER

Written by James Goldman

"The Christmas court of King Henry II -1183- but this holiday season, intrigue has intruded on the merriment. Who will inherit Henry's throne? Henry favors his youngest son; his wife Eleanor favors their oldest son."

Light Board: Ian Solomon Sound Board: NA
Prop Master: Timothy Kilbride

Notes: Ed Hayman (DN) "The Theater Company's production, as staged by Earl D.A. Smith and handsomely designed by Melinda Pacha, shows what can be done with THE LION IN WINTER. David Regal is a properly sardonic, rather frantically expansive Henry, though the role isn't a stretch for him."

Larry DeVine: (DFP) "LION IN WINTER is a dramatic banquet. There is not a dull role in it. Tim Alvaro... plays young Richard... with fine vigor. Ted Moniak is teenaged John with a flair for royal wimpishness without going outside his character... Tim Kilbride is thoroughly nasty... Together, Feurring and Regal are an exceptional match-up. They make you wonder what the Theater Company would... make MacBeth."

Title: BOESMAN AND LENA
Written by Athol Fugard

"Fugards’s scream for justice and compassion in South Africa is fully realized in this compelling story of two black scavengers emerging from the underbrush with their total possessions."

Performers: Darius Dudley (Filling in for the seriously ill Earl D.A. Smith) as Boesman, Tracy Gidson, and Greg Bowman.

Notes: Ed Hayman (DN) "The world of BOESMAN AND LENA, however, is even more chilling because, like the wretched wilderness road in WAITING FOR GODOT, it has an endless, timeless quality. One imagines this muddy, ragged, quarreling couple, the brutish Boesman (Darius Dudley) and the waery sassy Lena (Tracy Gibson) wandering forever in this treeless wasteland, a strak, grumpy assemblage of burlap, soil, and old auto parts, designed by Mark Choinski and director Timothy Alvaro.

"Lena is the first major role for Ms. Gibson, a UofD student, and she acquits herself admirably. Her Lena runs on anger and the satisfaction that comes from stubbornness. He ranger rises and fall but never disappears.

"As Boesman, Darius Dudley, a Detroit Repertory Theater regular, is more relaxed than I’ve ever seen him. His Boesman is a man reduced to an animal level by the need to survive.

Ed Hayman (BN) "... MISTER ROBERTS is as irresistible as ever. as the Theater Company proves with its wonderfully fresh revival... Beer has coached his bright cast to look like sailors, carefully avoiding the campiness that often ruins... productions of this play... Melinda Pacha has managed to turn the small stage into a deck of ship, complete with fold-out staterooms and crew quarters. Her costumes have the right sweaty look, too."

David Regal has assembled a uniformly talented cast, women who deliver the laughs, brooding questions and common sadness - to the point of real tears - that is TALKING WITH."

Ed Hayman (DN) "That's the lot - women of all ages, plain and simple, angry and crazy, beautiful and in pain, brought to us in the most vivid, carefully crafted array of performances to be assembled on the same Detroit stage in a long time..."

Notes: Larry Devine (DFP) "Christopher Darga is funny as a lunatic... Rick Hudson - and where has this wobbly, handdog face been before? - is funny as the bozo-in-charge. Ted Moniak, as the underling somewhat saner than most, is funny. (But) ACCIDENTAL DEATH OF AN ANARCHIST is not all that funny. The way The Theater Company winds it, this... evening of Fo has a great many laughs. But you will never see actors working harder to get them than in director David Regal's staging... creating comedy all by themselves with not much script to go on... give this troupe credit... they have paid their dues...

Rick Argas (DN) "ANARCHIST SUFFERS ACCIDENTAL DEATH."

Ed Hayman (DN) "WITH THE SLAPSTICK IN CHECK, THIS FO FLIES" "Round Two of Dario Fo turns out to be more fun that round one... The Theater Company's handling of Fo's collegiate brand of humor is smarter than the Attic's... Regal has more than a few passable jokes to play here, thanks to the several translations he deftly stitched together. He emphasizes an ensemble approach to what could become a one-man show..."

Performers: Anita Barone, Dana Gamarra, John Puchalski, David Leidholt, Mary Bremer, Linda Bennett, William Paul Unger, Marty Klebba, Peg Humphrey, John Lark, Suzie Walker, and the SET FROM HELL!

Notes: Martin Kohn (DFP) "...happily, the Theater Company's WIZARD OF OZ is... a living replica of the movie--without the luxury of the retakes, and that only contributes to the fun. His Dorothy, Anita Barone, wide-eyed in gingham does a fine impression of the young Judy Garland. The limber Dana Gamarra, flops and falls about the stage and delivers a healthy rendition of 'If I Only Had A Brain'... David Leidholt, as the Tin Man, embodies the central irony of the Character, hard on the outside, soft on the inside... John Puchalski does a pretty fair Bert Lahr as the Cowardly Lion... as Glinda, the good witch, Linda Bennett is sickly sweet -- and properly so. And William Paul Unger's Wizard is a lot like Frank Morgan's.

"Among all the Players only Bremer, as the Wicked Witch, has been given leeway to veer away from the movie. This makes for a pleasant departure. With a voice that comes straight out of THE EXORCIST, Bremer doesn't cackle, she growls.

"'Our most popular play,' says Arthur Beer."

Jon Katz, Rob Maniscalco, Ted Moniak. And a REAL SNAKE!

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Funny, sympathetic look at Southern Faithful... it is funny but not a cartoon... Regal is not above a little directorial strangeness... casting as half-witted young parents a pair of performers who look very much like brother and sister... Arthur Beer is an icon of iron Southern will... around him are some singular performances and characters..."

Ed Hayman (DN) "... as director David Regal big cast fills the stage with writhing, impassionate celebrants like figures from a Thomas Hart Benton mural. HOLY GHOSTS is a showcase for the student company Regal and Beer have developed over the past few seasons, and the fruit of their labors is evident."

Title: CREEPS
Written by David Freeman

"CREEPS deals with the frustration and anger of cerebral palsy victims and their inability to reckon with the rejection of the normal world. Hiding out in the men's bathroom, four men present a picture of humanity that is afflicted physically not mentally, and yet is disconnected by the world as being 'half human.'"

Notes: Michelle Belaskie (Tribune) "The power behind CREEPS lies in the talent of its actors who hold back nothing in presenting a group of cerebral palsy victims and in recreating the often inhuman behavior those not similarly afflicted show to them... each of the actors show great sensitivity..."

Ed Hayman (DN) "...staged with determined realism by Christopher Darqa and his excellent cast... youthful zeal for integrity of performance..."

Performers: David Regal, Evelyn Orbach, John Michael Lark, and Paula Harrigan.

Note: Running length: three hours and twenty minutes.

Notes: Larry DeVine (DRP) "...with David Regal giving the performance of his sizable career here...(and) Arthur Beer's quartet of actors puts a match right under it's seat. Paula Harrigan's is a perfect picture of a lambkin amid ogres. John Michael Lark artfully and subtly plays her husband Nick being bounced around like a stumblebum...you don't get a performance like Regal's George without a dirty fighter like Orbach as his marital sparring partner."

Ed Hayman (DN) "...George prowls designer Melinda Pacha's dusty academic den like a passive-aggressive Buddha...Regal is solidly in control."

Clarence Persinger (Monitor) "...the Theater Company has saved the best for last..."

Title: ON THE VERGE

Written by Eric Overmyer

"A delightful expedition of three Victorian explorers that venture into the America of the 1950's."

Performances 9 Where: Studio Theater (Arch Bldg)
Director: David Regal Tech Director: Mark Choinski
Set Design: Mark Choinski Costume Design: Melinda Pacha
Lighting Design: Tim Alvaro
A.D. and Stage Manager: Susan Reno
Light Board: Thomas Galasso Sound Board: Jon Katz Prop Master: David Leidoldt

Performers: Mary Bremer, Peg Humphrey, Andree' Chippi, and Ted Moniak.

Notes: ON THE VERGE opened with the three ladies entering the theater off the roof and through a window at the rear of the auditorium. Also, Ted Moniak played 7 roles in this play.

Notes: Devine (DFP) "Ted Moniak, a shy actor who is one of Detroit's unsung treasures, gives the finest performance of the Theater Company season in a new comedy ON THE VERGE... The three actresses have a rough time making theater out of a script that hampers them so... Overmyer does not hamper Ted Moniak, who makes you stop and think twice about trolls. (A favorite line, from the most ingenious of the ladies to him: 'What's it like being a troll?' ... when ON THE VERGE is forgotten, one may remember Moniak's cannibal who speaks with the foreign accent of who ever his last meal was..."

VN (Chuck Beaubean) "The Theater Company does an excellent job... Throughout the play, the (ladies) encounter several characters, all played by the very talented Ted Moniak. These encounters are the highlight of the play. Each one is uproariously funny and Moniak is the main reason. He plays an abominable snowman, a jungle cannibal and a troll, among others. Overall, ON THE VERGE provides an interesting, humorous night at the Theater."

Title: BURY THE DEAD

Written by Irwin Shaw

"A modern classic - this stirring and eloquent play employs brilliantly imaginative theatricality to convey its timeless message. In a series of touching scenes the dead soldiers talk with their loved ones and remember the days, now lost forever."

Notes: Devine (DFP) "Yes, a flash or two of moments that an actor can play. An actress I've never seen before named Miriam Yezbick has a wonderful short scene... is a burst of light in this dolorious business." Devine also liked Carl Knisely as an "old pro"...

He felt the play was "otherwise, mostly tedium."

Title: LOOT

Written by Joe Orton

Play originally planned for this spot was ENDGAME by Samuel Beckett. But David Regal substituted this play of long-time Earl D.A. Smith favorite Joe Orton. This was done as a tribute and in memory of the recently deceased "Earl the D.A."

Performances 9 Where: Studio Theater (Arch Blgd)

Set Design: Mark Choinski Costume Design: Melinda Pacha
Lighting Design: Mark Choinski
A.D. and Stage Manager: Janice Kempner Light Board: Patti Selonke Sound Board: Andree' Chippi
Prop Master: Chris Huskin

Notes: John Kennert (Oakland Press) "No one could ask for a crisper production than David L. Regal's... Death and comedy are two terrific extremes and Regals' young cast plays it straight and correct, always keeping a serious edge to the wild comedy... Suspense stays high possibly because Hursly, Jackunas, and Cahill—all making impressive U-D debuts—look like they are scared to death up there. First night jitters or play acting? It works. ... Harry Wetzel's performance as Truscott of the Yard... is one of the smartest comic turns of the Detroit season. A master of timing, he milks most of the evening's tumult of laughter... Melinda Pacha's costume design lends a thoroughly '60's feeling to the play. LOOT... is worthy of your attention. Seek it out."

Larry Devine (DFP) "... halting, too close to the vest... Wetzel was excellent. David L. Regal plays it too carefully. His attention was somewhere else and not in the hide and run style that the french use for boudoir farces and Orton used for black comedies."

George Bulanda (DN) "Director David L. Regal and the Theater Company troupe generally have the right idea in this production... Harry Wetzel is nearly perfect..."
16th Season -86/87- Show Dates from March 6 to March 22. 1987
Title: A TASTE OF HONEY
Written by Shedagh Delaney

"A bittersweet portrait of a working class adolescent and her relationship with a black sailor, homosexual art student, and a fun loving, saloon frequenting mother."

Performances 9 Where: The Theater (Marygrove)

Performers: Mary F. Bremer, Leslie Tanner, Tom Galasso, Roosevelt Johnson, and Chris Huskin

Notes: Larry Devine (DFP) "A TASTE OF HONEY sours in revival...
You sit at the Theater Company's revival of Shedagh Delaney's 1959
A TASTE OF HONEY pretty much swathed in befuddlement at what to think about this drawn out, squirm production."

Ed Hayman (DN) "... fitfully effective revival... lives better in memory than revival... (memorable for) Bremer's weird stab at an English accent... It's powerful... executed by this ensemble with the kind of authority that has earned director Yolanda Fleischer her deserved reputation as our leading specialist in traditional realistic drama."

Title: GRANDMA DUCK IS DEAD

Written by Larry Shue

"From the author of 'THE FOREIGNER,' this wildly offbeat play is poignant and revealing as it uses the high jinks of a group of college seniors to point up their underlying concern with more serious subjects that await after graduation."

Performances 9 Where: The Studio (Arch Bldg)

Director: Arthur Beer Technical Director: Mark Choinski

Set Design: Melinda Pacha Costume Design: Melinda Pacha

Lighting Design: Mark Choinski

Light Board: Miriam Yezbick Sound Board: Terry Collins

Prop Master: Duncan Hursley

Performers: Ted Moniak, Jon Katz, Keith Tverberg, Sue Reno, Roosevelt Johnson, and Jolene V. Shortson.

Notes: Ed Hayman (DN) "We can all go back to 1968 now, if for only an evening, in the Theater Company's hilarious production of the late Larry Shue's first play, GRANDMA DUCK IS DEAD. As staged by Arthur Beer, it is performed with an authority that only a group of real wise-guy students could manage... Melinda Pacha's design is so evocative (of a real college dorm room) that you can almost smell the dirty socks... this is a hilarious production"

Martin Kohn (DFP) "Play is set in June, 1968 at everyman's college ... a celebration of youth and palship. I laughed a lot and recognized in the characters, people I knew at a certain time including myself... Ted Moniak is wonderfully maniac as Woody, who probably grows up to be Larry Shue. Keith Tverberg's Ben is a lovely foil, slower than Woody but keeping pace. Roosevelt Johnson is believable as Tim, the one character touched by tragedy, and has the best Beatles accent of the lot when the script calls for it... Melinda Pacha's set and costumes are perfect. "

Light Board: Rick Frederick/Sue Reno

Sound Board: Leslie Tanner Prop Master: Chris Huskin

Notes: An original work by Dr. Beer commissioned by the Michigan Sesquicentennial Commission.

Ed. Hayman (Detroit News) "... fulfills it's assignment admirably and more."

Martin F. Kohn (DFP) "The 1920's are conjured up even before the play begins. As speakers softly conjure out some of that era's recording, among the more discernable of which are 'Melancholy Baby' and 'I Ain't Got Nobody.' Melancholy is, of course, an understatement and the Sweets had somebody on their side. They had Clarence Darrow.

"Beer wisely resists the temptation to focus on Darrow... instead he focuses on everybody... with so many characters (25) and only so much time... can't make all the characters interesting. This is where director David L. Regal pitches in...

"Beer is a fine, flinty Darrow, always in command without over-whelming. Charles Anthony Jackson brings a skein of moral fiber to his Ossian Sweet, while Tim Rhode is equally effective as Henry Sweet. David Berg as the weasely Milgutoast and David Bokas as the cop with the bouncing hand are standouts among a competent corps of actors."

Notes: L. DeVine: "... and the ensemble acting is immaculate as it generally is when Fleischer is given a play where people are very close to each other... Laurie V. Logan, one of Detroit's premier actors, is of course the pillar of good-humored propriety as the mother superior. It is marvelous casting to mix mature talents like Logan, Peg Humphrey, Shirley Benyas and Carole Vernon with the less experienced performers. Those women are in good company though, with Chippi, Catherine Maher, Nina Querimit and Susan Reno as the novice who may never make it through basic training...
Fleischer maintains the gentlest tone without getting soppy."
The Monitor "CRADLE SONG: another victory for the Theater Co... the play is a moving portrayal of the maternal instinct. The audience laughs and cries with the characters, and you will too."

Notes: Larry Devine: "In its Detroit premiere, WILD HONEY is also a mess. But there you are. What is a young troupe like the Theater Company to do - not take the big gamble and exist only on safe, sweet plays about nuns? ANNA PETROVNA... "she seems about the most interesting of the bunch, mainly because Yolanda Fleischer determinedly plays her with considerable worldly wisdom."

Notes: Marty Kohn (DFP) "Mary Bremer plays Betty with exceeding warmth and an flawless southern accent." The Play "is delightful and Beer has directed it to perfection."

Ed Hayman (DN), "This is by far the best of the several FOREIGNERS presented around here in recent seasons... Mark Choinski's rustic set is a delight too, with it's walls full of furry and finny trophies. The Theater Company's THE FOREIGNER simply is the most fun you can have in a Metro Detroit theater these days."

Prop Master: Miriam Yezbick

Performers: Rick Frederick, Cheryl Roy, Catherine Maher, Patricia Thompson, Jim Griffin, Stan Cahill, Paul Marquis, and Tim Pickering.

Notes: Ed Hayman (DN) "Foote, the prolific Texas screenwriter, playwright, and chronicler of family roots, seems to be engaged in a personal exploration here. Small hurts like these can resonate across generations. And he is well served by director Yolanda Fleischer, whose specialty is the realistic family drama, the play in which the action is in the dynamics of personal relationships. She has staged LILY DALE with the same clarity and careful authenticity that has distinguished her best work.

"All the performances in her ensemble are good, and a few are wonderful. Foremost among them are Rick Frederick's Horace. He registers his profound feelings with changes in his complexion and that hurt look in his eyes that seem to intensify, like a light being turned up with a rheostat, at each insult.

"And Melinda Pacha's antique-filled living room set and period costumes are juts right - as usual."

Performers: Tom Galasso, David Berg, Jennifer Jones, and Paul Marquis.

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "TOTAL ABANDON is the play that isn't there. Something is happening on the stage of The Theater Company. But it is mainly a churning, against all odds performance by Thom Galasso in the leading role... It is a theatrical three card note. Watch this febrile young actor! Keep your eye on the Galasso... and the evening is over and you've been had... director David Regal judiciously cut some of the more sensational parts of the script..."

Ed Hayman (DN) "... the script has several moments of chilling journalistic realism, staged by David Regal with an eye toward letting the ugly facts speak for themselves..."

Clarence Persinger (Monitor) "Galasso's performance is nothing short of amazing. His hurt and haunted look stays with you. David Regal has done an excellent job in casting and direction."

Title: THE SERVANT OF TWO MASTERS

Written by Carlo Goldoni Adapted by Arthur J. Beer

"A delightful blend of high comedy and farce by 'The Italian Moliere' - a festive holiday show for the entire family."

Performances 11 Where: Earl D.A. Smith Theater

Director: Arthur J. Beer Tech Director: Mark Choinski
Lighting Design: Jennifer Jones
A.D. and Stage Manager: Catherine Maher
Light Board: Rich Snodsmith Sound Board: Victor Millard
Prop Master: Miriam Yezbick and Rick Frederick

Performers: Jim Griffin, David Calvin Berg, Patti Selonke, Rick Frederick, Richard Logue, Kathy Cherasaro, Tim Pickering, Stan Cahill, Denise A. Nowak, Lisa Kiessel, Arthur Mellos, Paul Marquis, and Andrew Watson.

Notes: Clarence Persinger (Monitor): "The Theater Company is presenting a festive, colorful production of Carlo Goldoni's commedia dell'arte classic... Dr. Beer not only did the adaptation (clever but very verbose) but he also directs this lively 13 member cast with high energy and even dignified the detail masks and the circus tent stage setting. It's a fun evening of theatrics... Pickering is a real acrobat as he tumbles and rushes about the stage... Richard Logue adds an abundance of laughs..."

Bob Sadler (VN) "If you're looking for a way to liven up a dead week, you may be interested in checking out the latest production at The Theater Company, Goldoni's THE SERVANT OF TWO MASTERS. All the classic elements of comedy mixed with a dash of suspense and the unexpected are the heart of SERVANTS appeal. Cherasaro is a pleasant surprise... her little song and dance number is nothing less than enthralling... Nowak pulls off her role in a way that is quite convincing and effective... Cahill turns in his usual sterling performance..."
18th Season -88/89- Show Dates from Jan 27 to Feb 12, 1989

Title: TWO

Written by Ron Elisha

"A rabbi gives language lessons to a mystery woman in post-Holocaust Germany. The second US production of this Australian blockbuster."

Lighting Design: Paul Marquis

A.D. and Stage Manager: Paul Marquis

Light Board: Denise A. Nowak Sound Board: Charles Wilson

Prop Master: Miriam Yezbick

Performers: Arthur J. Beer and Miriam Yezbick

Notes: Ed Hayman (DN) "... Beer and Yezbick are asked to switch instantly, in the flick of a light cue, from murderous rage to existential sullenness to the venting of years pent-up grief and back again... they do so capably enough under the directorial hand of Yolanda Fleischer. Beer is a great crumudgeonly bear of a rabbi who makes us believe... Yezbick, a brave young actress... plays with a wild-eyed intensity that comes from deep within and never wavers... Yezbick makes us feel for her..."}

Larry DeVine (DFP) "... the discovery is carefully measured out for the audience in a staging by Yolanda Fleischer that does not hurry or preach... Arthur Beer gives one of those mature, unpredictable performances... you're never aware of where he lost his God. But you're always aware of his conscience... Miriam Yezbick is the most earnest and determined kind of actress..."

Janet Giorgio (VN) "The Theater Company has succeeded again... does this in a way that grabs a hold of the audience's attention and doesn't let go until the end of the play."

Title: ENTER LAUGHING

Written by Joseph Stein from a novel by Carl Reiner

"A brash boy from the Bronx breaks into show biz! Delightful comic nostalgia."

Performances 11 Where: Earl D.A. Smith Theater

Director: Mary F. Bremer Tech Director: Mark Choinski

Set Design: Melinda Pacha Costume Design: Melinda Pacha

Lighting Design: Mark Choinski

Prop Master: Miriam Yezbick

Performers: David Calvin Berg, Tim Pickering, Rick Frederick, Jim Griffin, Denise A. Nowak, Arthur Mellos, Andrew Watson, Bob Cafagna, Miriam Yezbick, Mattie Wolf, Peter Bellanca, Kathy Cherasaro, Paul Marquis, and Andrew Watson.

Notes: Kenneth Jones (DN) "Director Mary Bremer's ENTER LAUGHING emphasizes the laughs but cancels out the sentiment, delivering brash entertainment instead... Low comedy like this is hard to pull off, but Pickering's and Yezbick's synchronistic airing makes the seduction the comic centerpiece of the play... Bremer judiciously captures the more sedate fancies of youth, too, in sweet encounters between David and his steady Wanda (Kathy Cherasaro), the scripts toughest role... this play has the page turning feel of a good comic book, and Melinda Pacha's elegant but cartoonish scenic design neatly frames the scenes."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "ENTER LAUGHING is a pleasure to revisit... Miriam Yezbick, who has been playing sweet young things, here has a great night playing a hot young thing, wrapping her boa around David's neck and the rest of her around the rest of him. The scenes between Pickering and Yezbick are wonderful."

Notes: Chuck Persinger (Monitor) "As usual, The Theater Company has saved the best for last, with a superlative production of Steve Metcalfe emotional roller-coaster, comedic drama STRANGE SNOW. Three of the areas best actors create a powerful production under the careful direction of Dr. Arthur Beer. From start to finish this is a show about people on the edge. Set in the neat and tidy Flanagan home (colorfully detailed by Melinda Pacha) this is a heartfelt story of three lonely, frustrated people... This is a play which will stay with you forever. It's a must see for any serious theater goer."

Alfred Doblin (MC) "... this production tightly directed by Arthur Beer. The action is fluid but compassionate. Beer doesn't allow the play to wallow in melodramatics - despite some surface confusion, it is a very simple story told simply. The cast members are excellent with Mary Bremer standing out."

Written by Molly Newman

"'THE SHOOTING STARS' are a septet of female basketball players who travel small town mid-America - the time is Christmas week, 1962. Title: A DIFFERENT MOON

Written by Ara Wilson

"The setting is a small town in Arkansas, the time is 1951. The play is an eloquent and affecting study of three women coming to terms with a crisis not of their own making."

Performances 12 Where: Earl D.A. Smith Theater

Lighting Design: Mark Choinski

Lighting Board: Brian Doyen Sound Board: Rick Frederick

Props Master: Nina Quermit

Performers: Jonathan Katz, Patricia Thompson, Kathy Cherasaro, and Miriam Yezbick.

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Ara Watson's delicate Southern drama A DIFFERENT MOON is a fragile glass thing, played to echoes of parlor pianos, afternoon trains, and the wind in the pecan trees. The Theater Company's new production barely breathes on it, as if they're aware this piece could not bear unkindness. And that turns out to be exactly the right approach. Yezbick is gifted in seeming to wish she could just be part of the wallpaper... Patricia Thompson is wonderful as the mother... The best compliment payable to Kathy Cherasaro is that she plays teenage Jean truly to life... Fine staging by Walter Mark Hill."

Nancy Dziedzic (VN) "Walter Hill's direction is the saving grace... But then, direction never stands alone... as it stands, the play works. To experience four strong actors, see A DIFFERENT MOON, if only for the characters."

Ed Hayman (DN) "... Sarah is played movingly by Miriam Yezbick, with big, scared eyes that let us look in on a hungry soul..."

Title: TALK RADIO

Written by Eric Begosian

"Barry Champlain hosts 'Nighttalk' on radio station WTLK, Cleveland, Ohio. A recent article in TIME Magazine said, 'Such programs... have long served as a sort of national party line, a place where average citizens can rant, in blissful anonymity, about everything... Notes: Ed Hayman (DN) "Just watch David regal who plays Champlain to grating perfection in The Theater Company's pungently realistic new production. Every time a caller cries out in pain, Regal settles back in his chair, and that ugly look of bored malevolence crosses his face. It's a fine centerpiece in a group acting exercise that again reminds us how mighty this little Theater Company is.

"In TTC version, expertly staged by Mary Bremer, all 26 (characters) are separately cast and appear in ghostly light behind a black (scrim)... every cameo portrait is given just the right spin... unfailing street smart production..."

Larry DeVine (DFF) "... Rick Frederick is wonderfully funny as this goof with the altered mind. Rick Hudson is grand as the doting floor man with the 'why me' expression on his face."

Notes: George Bulanda (DN) "The production of TTC has some moments of glistening humor and some stylish performances but director Arthur J. Beer's pace is on the loud, frantic side.

"Of all the characters, Rick Hudson stands out as the player King. His comic timing is right on the mark, and he's got a rich, plummy voice he uses to great advantage... couldn't help but be reminded of Charles Laughton."

Lighting: Arthur Mellos Sound: Keegan-Michael Key
Prop Master: Christine Lomasney and Mary Vinette

Performers: Arthur J. Beer, Tim Rhoze, and Rick Frederick

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "As long as there are lost boys in plays, there will always be roles for the arresting young actor Rick Frederick. If he ever plays Lear, who cares? Frederick is beautifully bedraggled and vulnerable as he makes his own kind of dear drama out of comedy... Rhoze is the actor on the other end of the show's comic teeter-totter. Rhoze's T-Bone is the rock solid buddy... The empathy of Frederick and Rhoze makes a special even out of Klein's small, bright play... If this show needed a pay-off, the final scene is it: Rhoze and Frederick in a car that's paid for this time, with a new buddy in the back seat, a moon-faced derelict Beer pressing his bald head into Rhoze's neck with the joy of having a friend. Rhoze reaches back and pats Beer's pate, and Frederick beams at the horizon. Wonderful. Rhoze is an actor to watch - because you will want to say you saw him when."

Ed Hayman (DN) "... when this play was unveiled (in Louisville's HUMANA FESTIVAL) it was a forgettable hoot. But, in the hands of The Theater Company it becomes something more. Director Yolanda Fleischer and her suburb three man cast take time to find the humanity behind the yuks... the other nine roles are played by the redoubtable Arthur Beer... Beer has all these caricatures nailed, and gives several of them a dose of the same poignancy that makes T-BONE AND WEASEL more than the Dukes Of Hazzard gone astray..."

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Critics are not dumb. they are not going to give bad reviews to God... Holton as the unhumanly cheerful stranger is wonderful, and so is Jennifer Jones as the waitress who in the last twenty four hours has tried fly-casting and baseball and now wants to try the bartender. Denise A. Nowak, a very much improved actress here, is the impatient local phs-ed teacher... and Tim Pickering, who has a kind of inner sunshine to his acting, is probably best of all as the boozy little mechanic..."

Ed Hayman (DN) "THIRTY MINUTES OF TALENT STRETCHED INTO A WHOLE

"... Tim Pickering has a nice moment or two as the reeling drunk, giving the character an air or originality it doesn't deserve..."

Notes: Reed Johnson (DN) "Take a well known text or premise, in this case 'the Flood.' Add a few simple harmonies, comic entanglements, double entendres, romantic conflicts and a degree of spiritual uplift. Then you must find actors who can pull off the difficult trick of pulling it off. As luck would have it. The Theater Company cast manages this feat pretty well. Properly, Arthur Beer's robust and commanding Noah holds the production together... the ensemble produces torrents of enthusiasm and vocal energy. Rick Frederick makes a strong impression..."

Performers: Miriam Yezbick, Karen Kron, Patricia Thompson, Mary F. Bremer, Dorothy Hutton, Sandra Sebree-Daniels, Kathryn Cherasaro, Cheryle Roy, Jennifer Jones, Amy Larion,
Chris Berryman, and Joe Hislop

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "The Theater Company's Michigan premiere of Martin's new play VITAL SIGNS is an evening of all-over conjurement. It's homegrown Homer, one wild meaty tale after another. And it is acted out by 10 uncommon women marching with knees high to the writer's exotic inner heartbeat... Mary Bremer is expected to be good () but Regal here has introduced some fine young actors who, at a guess, find themselves suddenly doing things they never thought themselves capable of. Karen Kron, whom I've never seen before, is a young wife (whose) husband beats her, rapes her brutally and she simply waits placidly until she pour fire starter on him and light it... Jennifer Jones, an actor with a storm inside her... Amy Larion plays a girl tested and found to have no personality at all... these people, the actors being indistinguishable from their characters, are knockouts."

Richard Marsh (Heritage Newspapers) "... the production is up the usual U-D standards. The female cast, including Mary Bremer, all did a fine job. The set, the public area outside the rest room, was well made, though perhaps a bit fancy..."

Performers: Michael Kowal, Tim Pickering, Rick Frederick, Mary L. Vinette, Greg Trzaskoma, Maria Bortell, Kathryn Cherasaro, Karen Kron, and Cheryle Roy.

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "How does TTC find these plays so thoroughly unknown west of the Hudson? There is a little confusion in this show. Isn't the electric-wire Tim Pickering the best young actor in recent Theater Company history? He is unless Rick Frederick is on the stage. And vice versa. This evening's director, Arthur Beer, addresses that by putting them both in the same show. Lucky show... the female performers in this show are much more than pawns. It may be that we have seen these three groping men a few times in other plays, but Pickering, Frederick, and Kowal make them newly special."

Notes: Martin Kohn (DFP) "'BELLY OF THE BEAST' IS A THRILLER!"

"The last thing you want to do is make eye contact with David Regal: it's safe in real life, but you don't want him to catch you watching him play convicted killer Jack Henry Abbott... the odds are in your favor. The theater is dark and what little light there is is on the stage. The odds never were with Abbott. In Mary Bremer's staging of the play there is Regal and then there is everyone else... outstanding of whom is Keegan-Michael Key as lawyer, convict and the obnoxious waiter Abbott kills. As for Regal, his portrayal is chilling, tragic, and understated."

Light Operator: David DeAngelis Sound: Kate Peckham

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "It is quite an ensemble, directed by Walter Mark Hill... all the 20 some actors are good, but some of them are special because their roles are long enough to give them running room. Greg Trzaskoma is that sweetly officious guard, a young actor with a cherry round face of an old Irish character actor like Ed Brophy or Frank McHugh. John Stokes and Michael Kowal play the wonderful prissy pair smarting off about the galleries they know..."

Kenneth Jones (DN) "Hill does pull some fresh performances from Amy Larion and Molly Jordan as a couple of dreamy students who love art. and from a dead-on Cheryl Roy as an articulate curator who describes one of the show's pieces as 'magically demarcated.'"

Kathleen Spring Riethmeier (VN) "The patrons are escorted to their seats through what appears to be a room lifted intact from the DIA, complete with floor diagrams, bland walls, spot lights on the art work, and guards suspiciously eying you. A nervous theater-goer turns to her date and says 'Why is there a guard on stage?' Yes, it's MUSEUM at the Theater Company... a realistic guard... a Jim Belushi look-a-like (Trzaskoma)... Director Walter Mark Hill orchestrates it so no two things occur at exactly the same time but maintains the illusion that five things are happening at once..."

Performers: David L. Regal as Joe; Karen Moore as Ann, his wife:

Amy Larion as Mary, his daughter; David Fox as Lou, his friend; and David DeAngelis, as Eddie, Mary's friend.

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Getting flabbergasted by an actor is the hope that keeps us coming back time after time to the theater. Just once every blue moon would be enough. At the Theater Company, in a stage surprise called SPEED OF DARKNESS, blue moon time is here.... The unsung SPEED... is one of those dangerous Saturday night specials that the Theater Company persistently buys out of hock. In the theater, that's good. As the homeless Lou, David Fox inhabits a space he's never been to before.... It is as if Fox is inside a cage and David Regal is outside it and doesn't know if the gate is locked or not. What a pair of actors!

"One of the most wonderful scenes I've ever witnessed is the childlike Fox on the couch with Regal passed out on his lap, lecturing to deaf ears in hobo-speak about your modern Picasso-like statuary versus the more traditional generals on horseback.

"Amy Larion as the daughter comes up with the most seraphic affection for Fox's odd, embarrassed stranger. Karen Moore is the mother, and David DeAngelis is the boyfriend who is rightly pretty twitchy around Regal. Fleischer's staging is note-perfect."

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Here are some theatrical words to live by: There is no play so perfect that it cannot be enlivened by the presence of Arthur Beer in a hideous toupee. Beer, who is bald, is to bad rugs as Beethoven is to whoopee cushions... Frederick is wonderful in his latest example of the type of role he has made a career of at TTC: fuzzy little guy who cannot quite believe life is giving him hotfeet. The set is by Melinda Pacha and lighting by Mark Choinski, and Arthur Beer's hair designs may come from Clydes Carpet World."

Monitor: "Rick Frederick must have been a raccoon in another life. Cheri Johnson is a cracker-jack roller skater and has a cute bubbly voice... Linda, the town beauty queen (bouncy and dizzy as done by Suzanne LeBatt... Michael Kowal is ever-grinning... LLOYD'S PRAYER is guaranteed to provide you with side-splitting laughs..."

Notes:  Larry DeVine (DFP) "The play is full of posing and symbolism. Now and again in director Arthur Beer's gothic staging, the sizable cast poses as a forest - standing stock still with their backs to the audience - it's a shadow play with actors bunching together to give a sense of how Wilson saw the town itself: one massed, unkind beast... seems like something Wilson was compelled to get out of his system. And the Theater Company got it out of its system, and we can say we've seen it and go on."

Edward Havman (DN) "Beer keeps the various levels of Mark Choinski's wooden-plank set full of people, shadowy figures who come together in little groups to gnaw on a tidbit of gossip about someone who isn't there. Beer's big cast offers a properly grim mural of a backwater in an advanced stage of decay. Among the many who get the job done handily are Yolanda Fleischer as the love-starved cafe owner, Joe Hislop as her lover, Joyce Uzelac as the abused old lady, Dorothy Hutton as an old woman, and Molly Jordan, Christopher Berryman, Heather Landry, and Kris Walby as restless town teens.

Tim Pickering, and Joe Hislop.

Notes: Ed Hayman (DN) "Jory opted to let David L. Regal direct his latest. This proves to be a smart choice. ...Ata, a fragile flower of yuppy womanhood... played by a wide-eyed Miriam Yezbick with that little frantic flutter in her voice that makes her so vulnerable. Bo is a smooth talking grifter with a soft spot in her heart. Wiry Jennifer Jones plays her with an explosive blend of street smart and sex appeal. Here's Pickering, in the funniest performance of the Metro Detroit Theater season, slouching drunkenly through the door in tux and new running shoes..."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "CRIMINAL HEARTS is a play about getting up your nerve. What makes it funniest is Martin's oblique take on source material... CRIMINAL HEARTS may throw you at first. But let's understand that performances like Jones and Yezbick's do not come out of thin air. Jones particularly has a way with fiery irony. So her performance is a split decision between being scared of or delighted with her. Pickering's style has a fidgety sweetness to it that is mixed with an arresting male tension. Regal's direction shows no strain. As well. Melinda Pacha's design and Mark Choiniski's lighting still convey a smart modern apartment and that can't have been easy."

Title: WOMEN IN BARS

Written by Kim Carney

"INFLUENCE relates the story of Susan, a young alcoholic waiting for a date in a singles bar. An abstract look at one woman's inner struggles with the positive and negative urges that try to control her actions. BOMBSHELLS is a slice of life look at Betty and Rose, blue collar workers in an auto plant in Lansing, as they deal with their intertwining work and personal relationships in a country-and-western bar."

Notes: Marty Kohn (DFP) "An essentially sad situation is spattered with laughs, thank mostly to Susan's quarrelsome ego states, played broadly (and rightly so) by Kate Peckham and Cheryl Roy. Mary Vinette is warm but not saccharine as the waitress and Keegan-Michael Key is believable as the hapless date. In BOMBSHELLS, the main characters are played by powerful P.J. Jenkinson and Mary F. Bremer. Director Arthur Beer has paced BOMBSHELLS well and filled out the stage with extras who provide ambiance without intruding."

Edward Hayman (DN) "Directed deftly by Arthur Beer and performed with warmth and wit by this young cast, Carney's modern morality tale is as blackly funny as it is tragic and authentic. Carney clearly knows what she is talking about... Carney wants to like these ladies anyway without letting them off the hook. And we do."

Title: THE WHITE ROSE

Written by Lillian Garrett-Groag

"This thought provoking play dramatizes the true story of five students arrested in Munich in 1942 for distributing leaflets protesting the Nazi regime, under the name of 'The White Rose.' Placed in an era where freedom of thought is endangered and fear is a common weapon of oppression, the play explores the conflict between the courageous students and their interrogators."

Performers: David Regal, Peter Bellanca, Keegan-Michael Key,

Amy Larion, David DeAngelis, Greg Trzaskoma, Chris Berryman, and Kris Walby.

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Amy Larion plays the young woman very nicely, with consistent intelligence so that she seems starry-eyed but not hopeless. Her cohorts are David DeAngelis, Kristopher Walby, Christopher Berryman and Keegan-Michael Key. Greg Trzaskoma is Regal's military orderly. Under Yolanda Fleischer's direction, Regal is the steady axel of the show. The set by Mark Choinski - Regal's office, an interrogation room, and the student's attic - once again shows what realism this marvelous designer can create on that little stage."

Dan Sikora (Monitor) "Regal is commanding as he exposes the multiple facets of a man trapped. In the end, Mohr's (Regal) sin, and the sin of the majority of the German populace, becomes the sin of complacency. Amy Larion is perfectly fragile as Sophie... her desolate eyes express the utter disbelief of the whole world (to Nazism) Keegan-Michael Key, DeAngelis, Walby, Berryman, Trzaskoma give solid performances. Peter Bellanca proves especially sinister as the German Office. Mark Choinski's set is faultless, the furnishings are rigid in the same manner as Nazi ideology..."

TITLE: THE DRESSER

Written by Ronald Harwood

"It is 1942, and the Blitz is raging over an English provincial city. Inside the slightly run-down theater of the city, a travelling theater troupe prepares to perform "King Lear." But "Sir," the actor-manager of the company is in no shape to go on stage. After a lifetime on the stage the pressures have become too much, especially now. While the members of the troupe panic, Norman, Sir's devoted dresser, struggles to save his fallen monarch of the stage for one last triumph. An affectionate, funny, moving portrait of life backstage."

Performers: Arthur Beer as Sir, Warren Reinecker as The Dresser, Greg Trzaskoma, David DeAngelis, Robin Lewis, Bill Mackenzie, Heather Landry, Susan Arnold, and Del Johnston

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFF) "Presto, alakazam, and out of the Theater Company's hat comes an unknown Warren Reinecker. There's theater for you: full of surprises... ah. actors... rising to the occasion. Always there when you need them. Those are the legends... and Reinecker in the title role is so good... his Norman is so sleek and bossy... plays it like a dancer... graceful, but he does not make Norman campy or silly. Regal's production has a competent supporting cast to play the others. But the ticket is that pas de deux at center."

Daniel Sikora (Monitor) "Other fine performances are given by Susan Arnold... Heather Landry as Midge, the overly precise Stage Manager and Robin Lewis as Irene, an incovenience with designs of working with Sir. The set designed by Melinda Pacha is one of the best to grace the stage of the Theater Company since they moved to this studio... excellent supporting cast..."

Notes: Chug Abramowitz (VN) "The play is carried by several strong performances and was well written. Some additional singing and group scenes connected the monologues well... the play's strongest performance came from Sakunah Delaney, in her portrayal of the grandmother... Jennifer Jones is solid. Keegan-Michael Key and Rick Hudson play smaller but very significant roles as two inner-city teachers with totally different attitudes. It is an eye-opening look at the problems of life in the ghettos...

"Michael Chenevert, as the 'Pusher Man,' is a jarring, disturbing glimpse of the hell that is facing young people on the streets today..."

Heather Landry, Peter Ballanca.

Notes: "Mark's gentle parable is painted in vivid storybook terms by director Walter Mark Hill and designer Melinda Pacha: He pipes in Strauss music and she colors the trunk of the crazy grape-bearing willowtree blue.

"In the various transformations that take place during the play, it's clear what happens to the characters but you're not precisely sure why the changes occur. In Mark's inscrutable fantasy, Jugger's sacrifice and his enduring love - transmitted by the gently expressive David DeAngelis with touches, hugs, and kisses - result in the family coming together.

"... DeAngelis is sensitive and tactile... he celebrates and encourages the individuality of each of his family... this play was joy each time I saw it..." D. Johnston

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Tim Pickering is dynamic and a little strange; you never know quite what's going to come out of that face onstage... he's the big bad wolf... the best computer jokes are in the set: the company's executive suite that changes color and cranks up music according to the mood of the occupants..."

Reed Johnson (DN) "... Walter Mark Hill's production generally hammers Clarvoe's steely dialogue with precision... those of us who enjoy the Theater Company's bare-knuckled esthetics can't afford to miss this play."

Daniel Sikora (Monitor) "DeAngelis, Chenevert, and Pickering give accomplished performances... Melinda Pacha's set design is delightfully sprinkled with the correct pop culture artifacts..."

Title: WOYZECK

Written by Georg Buchner Adapted by David Regal

"An anti-romantic and starkly realistic tragedy of sexual betrayal and murder."

Performances 13 Where: Earl D.A. Smith Theater

Director: David L. Regal Tech Director: Mark Choinski
Set Designer: Mark Choinski Costume Designer: Melinda Pacha
Light Design: Mark Choinski Drums: David Lentz
A.D. and Stage Manager: Leah Ankey Light Board: Robin Lewis

Notes: Larry DeVine (DFP) "Supposedly the second-greatest 23-year-old playwright who ever lived is Georg Buchner, who was finishing up his historic drama 'WOYZECK' when he died of typhus in 1837 in Zurich. WOYZECK was a noble experiment then; it is a noble experiment now in a rare revival adapted by David L. Regal for the Theater Company."

"As it stands, WOYZECK still is clearly a rare play in 19th and 20th Century drama. It was the first play about an underclass hero. Woyzeck is the put-upon and humiliated doosbody who erupts and murders his adulterous common-law wife. Honestly acted by a cast of 17 on the Theater Company's small stage, that theme is clear.

"Young actor Michael Chenevert plays Woyzeck with a building passion. He suffers so much indignation. First, his army commandant (Rick Hudson) lewdly slobber over his woman. The wacky white army doctor (Arthur Beer) feeds him through a bird cage. A handsome drum major (Chris Berryman) seduces the woman and brags about it to Woyzeck. All the while, the unseen island drummer pounds like the buildup of an expressionist movie sound track.

"It is rewarding to see the Theater Company grant WOYZECK a place in its schedule. Maybe not on purpose, they do the old show business chore: Leave us wanting more."

Notes: Reed Johnson (DN) "The low-budget U-D Theater Company has long been kind to the ministry. Despite slender resources, Artistic Director David L. Regal and friends, preach a gospel of artistic risk. Seldom has a production defined their mission better than TENT MEETING, the wickedly funny 9 year old satire that opened Friday night... Darrell, played by Kris Walby with loony pathos..."

Larry DeVine (DFP) "... Peckham and especially the developing Walby in his first sizable role at the Theater Company are good enough that they are not swept aside by Regal's stem winding emoting... Guaranteed, it's the only show this season with a baby that glows in the dark. 'Honey,' says it's mother (Peckham), 'How'd you learn to do that?'

Eric Pope (Legal News) "The U-D Mercy production benefits from three very good acting performances. It is the perfect vehicle for David Regal to show off his acting prowess as the maniacal preacher who totally dominates his two grown children. Kris Walby is very convincing as his slow-witted and socially unfit son Darrell, who takes turns being victim and tormentor. Kate Peckham gives a very entertaining performance as Becky. Set designing is always a challenge in the cramped quarters of the Smith Theater, and Melinda Pacha has met the challenge with the inside of a house trailer that sums up the squalor of the three character's existence."

Notes: Reed Johnson (DN) "...a rudely funny, ironically upbeat musical revue about women who love themselves too little and trash TV too much... Kate Peckham has an inspired turn as a game show hostess Baby Ruth... most impressed with Kellie Evans, whose honeysuckle-sweet voice and tambourine-thumping propels the gospel/sci-fi fantasia called 'God Is An Alien.' It's an ideal hymn for a gender - if not an entire generation that feels it must be on the wrong planet."

Larry Devine (DFP) "At the Theater Company, the participants are Miriam Yezbick, Leah Ankey, Benita Charles, Kellie D. Evans, Heather Landry, and the perennial portrayal of precocious teenagers, the wonderful Kate Peckham, seen here in public for the first time wearing lipstick... When it's sharpest, SIX WOMEN weirds out as far as the tabloids... in director Yolanda Fleischer's enthusiastic staging..."

"Watching Heather Landry and Kate Peckham, on stage right, playing with their Ken and Barby dolls was the funniest five minutes of the

Prop Master: Kristopher Walby, David DeAngelis

Performers: Mary F. Bremer as Truvy, Nina Kircher, Kate Peckham, Dorothy Hutton, Robin Lewis, and Blanche Graham.

Notes: Martin F. Kohn (DFP) "The half-dozen actresses do well with their Southern accents and, for the most part, equally well with their characters. As Annelle, Kate Peckham has the most changes to make and (she) handles them well. Robin Lewis is disarming as Shelby, even when she insists her wedding colors are 'blush' and 'bashful' not just pink and pink. As her mother, Mary F. Bremer is the Rock of Gibraltar... Blanche Graham both hoots and IS a hoot as Ouiser. Dorothy Hutton, as Clairee, has an obvious affection for her character... (Mark Choinski)'s set is close to perfection. That's real water coming out of those sinks, and the theater itself contributes Louisiana ambience by being oppressively hot."

Reed Johnson (DN) "Arthur J. Beer's very fine production overcomes the aridly sentimental stretches of Harling's perfumed tragedy-comedy. If the production has a keystone, it's Mary Bremer's pithy, urbane M'Lynn... Robin Lewis has the exquisite blend of cuteness, smarts and self-possession... Nina Kercher's Truvy projects a cheerful fatalism... (Mark Choinski)'s wonderful set is the best looking carport you'll ever see..."

Daniel Sikora (Monitor) "Truvy's is a living kiosk where the ladies post their emotions..."

Performers: Angelina Fiordellisi and Arthur Beer

Comments: Reed Johnson (DN) "... affords a memorable homecoming for Angelina Fiordellisi, one of the Theater Company's most lauded alumni. Paired with her old mentor, leading man emeritus Arthur Beer, this vital performer serves as a semi-conductor for the playwright's high voltage ambitions... Fiordellisi's has an amazing ability to concentrate her energy into spaces no larger than a pinpoint. Obliged to spend most of Act Two in a wheelchair, she contracts her body while expanding her soul exponentially."

Eric Pope (Legal News) "Once again Arthur Beer delivers a totally convincing portrayal... It is hard to imagine a better performance. Fiordellisi performs at the same high level in a role that requires more range..."

Daniel Sikora (Monitor) "... Fiordellisi returns in a homecoming that shows exceptional accomplishment. This is a dramatic actress with a flair for comedy, a full range of expression, and a pretty good singing voice to boot... Beer's portrayal is crafty and polished..."

Larry DeVine (DFF) "Faith, miracles, and the 1932 Nobel Prize physicist Werner Heisenberg's 'Uncertainty Principle' are just what every compassionate comedy needs, true or false? That is true, if they come accompanied onstage by Angelina Fiordellisi and Arthur Beer... The luminous Fiordellisi and Arthur Beer, in probably the finest performance he's ever given, are so sweet and humanly fallible that Faith with a capital F is thoroughly fascinating."

Notes: Reed Johnson (DN) "...Ida (Mary F. Bremer) rules this roost with irreverent warmth... in perhaps her best performance on a local stage, lanky Cheri Johnson conveys the sass, mental toughness and constant craving of this strikingly assured girl-woman. We can believe that she and Jennifer Jones'equally self-possessed June are blood kin."

Daniel Sikora (Monitor) "On a front porch as welcoming as any you might remember... Ed (Edgar Guest) possess(es) a keen cynical insight. The author has given him a good share of funny lines... when the play lulls abit, it is brought back to life with Ed's shoor-from-the-hip honesty."

Michelle Scott (LegalNews) "... the acting is solid, and Cheri Johnson as Dinah gives an especially fine performance. Mary Bremer serves as the anchor for the rest of the actors... The set is an excellantly reconstructed re-creation of the front porch of Ida's rooming house... this, combined with the intimate atmosphere of the Theater Company's auditorium make the play very personal..."

From the author, Claudia Allen: "I enjoyed seeing your production of ROOMERS -- Mary and the gang did lovely work, terrific set, good houses... and the two token guys in the play did a great job!"

Patrick Caporuscio, Marshall Zweig, Amanda Bernacchi,

Notes: Eric Pope (Legal News) "The friendly confines of the Theater Company's stage... provide a perfect venue for "The Day Room."... DeLillo's dialogue is like a high performance engine of 16 valves that hits different funny bones in rapid-fire succession. In a small, intimate theatre, you can hear how the playwright's vision of reality's absurdity hits each listener differently.

"This play proves to be a wonderful vehicle for local attorney Peter Bellanca... in a play where absurdity and insanity are always close at hand, ready to surprise you at the next turn in the conversation. Bellanca's measured delivery serves as an anchor."

Dan Skora (The Monitor) "Peter Bellanca is the glue that keeps the performance within intelligent reach. Crafty and wise, his character would rather converse about something than do it. Cheri Johnson gives an accomplished reading of her two roles. Ryan Carlson is hilarious as a television set. Larry Kron is a doctor who's proof that the MD's put too much starch in their shirts. Pat Caporuscio, Amanda Bernacchi, Erik Baker and William H. Tebo V complete the cast of zanies. "Day Room" is good funny comedy."

Performers: Mary Vinette, Emily Haase, Amanda Bernacchi, Robin Lewis, Maureen Dorrington, and Jim Shanley

Notes: This production drew the largest paying audience of any play performed at the Earl D. A. Smith Theater to this date.

Reviews: Daniel Sikora (Monitor) "For the run of this play, The Theater Company becomes a wonderfully entertaining company of women, with five first-rate professional acting performances. You will laugh, perhaps especially at Mary Vinette's Georgianne, a woman with more than her share of misconceptions about what it means to love and be loved. And you will be moved by the awareness that something happens along the road that leads from girlhood to womanhood, and that the booby man proves to be less a formidable opponent than the cynicism and despair that creeps into a heart with the passing of each unrequited love."

 Marty F. Kohn (DFP) "The standout among the cast is Maureen Dorrington, as Mindy, the groom's sister, who happens to be lesbian. Dorrington, who looks like a younger Signorney Weaver, remembers to go on acting when the spotlight is elsewhere. Her character is the most endearing, but Dorrington keeps earning the audience's affection... Ball gets an assist here from director Walter Mark Hill, who has a flair for putting people in close proximity and has made many of these moments. Scenic designer Mark Choinski's upscale Southern bedroom is tastefully inviting, and Melinda Pacha's costumes - or costume to the fifth power - deserve their inclusion in the title."

"'LOVE LETTERS' is a truly unique and imaginative theater piece. Comments: Reed Johnson (Detroit Journal) "Ives' string of seven Absurdist vignettes launches the 25th season of the UofD-Mercy Theatre Company: as directed by Arthur J. Beer, it's a singularly appropriate choice. Who'd thunk that the Theatre Company, a ragtag crew of inspired but underfunded U-D faculty, students and 'guest artists.' would still be with us in the '90's? Thankfully, the divinity that shapes our ends turns up aces every now and then.

"What keeps Ives' cerebrum from overruling his funny bone is his profound theatrical instinct, his love of give-and-take between actors."

Dan Skora (Detroit Monitor) "Words aren't just important here, they're everything. they are the essential element which enables us to formulate ideas and sets us apart from all the rest of creation. Sounds serious, doesn't it. In this comedy, it is anything but.

"Ryan Carlson has great stage presence and will someday garner roles to equal his talent. Amanda Bernacchi can make even a glib character seem interesting... Kate Peckham fetchingly plays the neophyte come to broaden her horizons. Dan Glomski as the language guru must have had a time of it learning all his lines. This is a sketch you'll want to see again, and is worth, as the saying goes, the price of admission alone."

Prop Master: Ribyn Lipnicki

Performers: Jennifer Jones, Laura Wing, Amanda Bernacchi, Emily Haase. Also the voices of John Hawkinson, Jim Shanley, and Arthur Beer.

Notes: Dan Skora (DetroitMonitor) "... "My Sister" can be enjoyed for the one memorable performance by Laura Wing. Her is one of those rare times when actor and role are absolutely made for each other. Wing's intensity is perfect for a character whose abilities greatly surpass her social position. She skillfully presents a woman of pride and determination tempered only by a deep seated insecurity over the mother who gave her life.

"And there is a splendid set by Melinda Pacha that stretches the limited confines of the Theatre Company's stage to encompass the whole of an affluent house - foyer, livingroom, kitchen, staircase, and upstairs bedroom - and does it in grand style."

Kenneth Jones (DetroitNews) "... a killer performance by Wing as Christine. She's tight and articulate, completely believable with her crazy mood swings... Wings's strength, flickering vulnerability and emotional undertow make you think of Ibsen's Nora, walking out the door of her own airless home at the end of "A Doll's House." Christine's rebellion in "My Sister"... is more primal and mysterious, proving there are many ways to leave."

Reed Johnson (OaklandPress) "Yolanda Fleischer's taut direction catches you off guard with its sudden vehemence. The mood swings are as deceptively innocuous as the jangling child's music box that can be heard between scene's."

Notes: Reed Johnson (OaklandPress) "It's hardly surprising to find the... Theater Company hanging out in this motley milieu. Artistic Director David L. Regal grew up in the Bay area and his fine atmospheric production reeks of affection and insider authority. "What's more, Saroyan's salty classic is exactly the kind of ensemble piece that the Theater Company does best. Bolstered by some memorable character parts - particularly Arthur J. Beer's crusty portrait of a tale-spinning Kit Carson - the production surely rates as a high point of the Theater Company's first quarter-century."
"... Wetzel's carefully balanced portrayal avoids lapsing into mannerism by maintaining a playful urgency. So does the production as a whole. We can smell the cigar smoke and sense the revolutionary chatter in the air, wafting through Mark Choinski's excellent set design."

Dan Skora (The Monitor) "The Theater Company's presentation boasts several exceptional performances. Mark Rademacher's finely etched saloon keeper is tough yet compassionate... Will Young is slick, crafty and men spirited as Blick... Ryan Carlson gets the biggest laughs with his first rate interpretation of the passive Dudley R. Bostwick."
25th Season -95/96- Show Dates from Feb 8 to Feb 25, 1996

Title: DRINKING IN AMERICA

Written by Eric Bogosian

"...a gallery of crazy drunks who straddle the social gamut, from a wino lying in the gutter dreaming down the neck of his bottle to a coked-up Hollywood agent so wired he could light up the Hollywood Bowl. What they share is their pathetic need to be 'special.'"

Performances 12 Where: Earl D.A. Smith Theater

Director: Marv Bremer Tech Director: Mark Choinski
Costume Design: Melinda Pacha Lighting Design: Ryan Carlson
A.D. and Stage Manager: Michelle Pedenelli
Light Board: David Ross Sound Board: Jennifer Fasulo
Prop Master: Robyn Lipnicki Choreography: Andre Chippi Lux

Notes: Notes: Kenneth Jones (DN) "Bogosian's two-hour collage, nicely underlined by a black wall plastered with liquor posters and ads, is populated by largely unfulfilled, searching characters. They are insiders, outsiders, have and have-nots, and their common link is an unshakeable desire for drink, status, money, drugs, power or sex: anything that makes them feel right in a wrong world.

"When the good actor John Hawkinson admits his life is terrific - you don't buy it. You listen to what he's not saying, and you hear an echo where his soul should be... Ryan Carlson is startling as the chilling street punk. Great work... Tim Alvaro is dry and funny... Lynch Travis has a fine turn as another street dreamer who sadly fantasizes about women and drink... You appreciate Rob Kolcon's restrained performance... Taras Los is wild and crazy."

Daniel Skora (DetroitMonitor) "Three things save this production, even push it into the category of good theatre. The first is its many exceptional performances. Jim Shanley runs frantically amuck as a lover gone impotent... Will Young is dissolve as the salesman who can't handle his loneliness... The second is director Marv Bremer's ability to achieve maximum affect without overkill... The third is the final skit. Charles VanHoose, in a brilliant interpretation of a born-again preacher, spews hell-fire, brimstone and redemption-with-a-vengeance. His pulpit is a gas-bag of ridicule and condemnation."
ON THE OPEN ROAD

Written by Steve Tesich
Note: First Theater Company Production in McAuley Auditorium

"Ali and Angel are on the open road, fleeing a civil war, pulling a cart loaded with art treasures salvaged from bombed-out churches and museum. Tesich has created a series of pungent, deeply theatrical images for the plight of 'civilized' man, whose cultivation cannot keep his darkest instincts at bay."

Title: SLY FOX

Written by Larry Gelbart

"Based on "Volpone", SLY FOX is a story of a scheming miser bent on extracting fortunes from a trio of rich greedy opportunists. Sly, pretending to be on his death bed, leads on the trio, saying he'll name each his sole heir. The extent the trio will go to acquire Sly's fortune knows no bounds."

Title: GREENSBORO: A REQUIEM

Written by Emily Mann

"An attack by some Ku Klux Klan members and self-styled American Nazis on an anti- Klan rally in a black neighborhood of Greensboro, N.C., on the morning of November 3, 1979. Within a few minutes, five demonstrators were killed and eight wounded. No Klansmen or Nazis were hurt. Though the attackers were identified (on video tape), nobody was ever convicted on criminal charges."

Marvin Belton, Rashid Mausi, Arthur J. Beer, Greg Olzewski, Robert Kolcon, Patrick Caparuscio, Dan Glomski, Conor Draves, Charisse Morrisette, and Del Johnston

Notes: A Michigan Premier
Kenneth Jones (DN) "Fleischer's custom for solid casting is evident... (Laura) Wing and earthy-rich Will Young are solid in their exchanges..."

Lawrence Devine (DFP) "... GREENSBORO... is a stir-it-up piece of theater that rattles cages in the good old agitprop style of bygone days... One notes the developing strength of Keegan-Michael Key, an actor who's grown up with this company... Esther Walton (is) almost a Greek chorus: Jennifer Jones as a traumatized bystander. And (Melinda Pacha) as a victim's widow expressing her harrowing sorrow in a scene more transfixing than any headline."

Daniel Skora (Monitor) "What can be found... are several gems among the performances. Yvonne DuQue gives an assured reading... Greg Olzewski is excellent... Arthur Beer has a small but scintillating part... Barbara Young and Marvin Belton are provocative. And Patrick Caparuscio draws one of the most controversial roles..."
